Feelers Made About 'Truce' For Viet Nam

Nhu, Brother Said To Favor Minh Contacts

LONDON (UPI) — Diplomatic sources Friday said "truce" feelers apparently are being made between the government of South Viet Nam and the Communist North Viet Nam regime.

According to the sources, the reported contacts between the two rival regimes in divided Viet Nam were believed aimed at some sort of truce arrangement with possible wider ramifications.

FAVORS CONTACTS

Ngo Dinh Nhu, brother and chief adviser to South Vietnamese President Ngo Dinh Diem, was said to favor the contacts with the regime of North Vietnamese President Ho Chi Minh.

There was no official confirmation of the reports.

(In Saigon, the government press agency labeled the reports as "sheer fantasy.")

In the absence of authoritative confirmation, the reports of truce moves were viewed with caution in Western diplomatic circles.

Ho Chi Minh has made repeated public offers to discuss a truce with the Diem regime but none has been accepted as far as is known. South Viet Nam is engaged in a bitter battle — with massive U. S. financial and military assistance — against the Communist Viet Cong guerrillas who are armed and equipped by the North Viet Nam regime.

Communist sources, while not confirming the reports, said such a rapprochement in Viet Nam would "make sense" in terms of the stated Communist policy that settlements should be sought by the regimes of a divided country. This also is the Communist position in relation to East and West Germany.

Communist affairs experts said Ho Chi Minh's desire for a settlement may be at least partly prompted by hope of lessening his dependence on Communist China. He has been reported for some time to have been wavering in his loyalty in the Moscow-Peking dispute but appears to have shown marked reserve toward the Red Chinese recently.

In the past North Viet Nam had to all appearances become increasingly dependent on Peking and influenced by Red China's policies.

Blowing Ginny Veers Off Coast Along Carolinas

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Hurricane Ginny, a vicious little lady with winds at 100 miles an hour, turned away from the watchful Carolinas' coast Friday night and plodded slowly northward.

The storm, erratic and apparently headed for the spot in the Atlantic where she was born 10 days ago, was plotted on a course that would, if continued, take her well away from a landfall.

The 8 p.m. advisory of the Miami Weather Bureau placed her about 120 miles south of Wilmington.

"Indications are for continued movement to the east-northeast," the advisory said.

43 STILL MISSING

Rescuers Pluck Seven From Mine

BROISTEDT, Germany (AP) — Rescue workers pulled seven muddy survivors from the flooded Lengede iron mine Friday night. With little hope, they then toiled on by floodlight in an effort to locate 43 other miners still missing underground.

The seven found haven on the arched floor of a gallery 180 feet below ground when icy waters of the mine's ore-washing reservoir broke a dam Thursday night and streamed into the 300-foot-deep mine. They were sealed in by water at both ends.

'RESCUE BOMB'
Drilling machinery cut a shaft toward the gallery to carry a "rescue bomb"—a metal tube 10 feet long and padded with foam rubber—that could haul them to the surface. But a drop meantime in the water level that opened one end of the gallery permitted rescue by less dramatic means.

The seven were saved by a raft pushed to them on an endless cable across 100 yards of water. Two by two, they rode across and were hauled out of the muddy shaft.

They emerged uninjured, though some had to be carried to waiting ambulances. They had been trapped 23 hours by the flood, estimated to total 650,000 cubic yards of water.

The seven were covered from head to foot with mud from the yellow ore-bearing earth when they emerged.

They gaped out thanks to their rescuers. Their wet clothing was stripped from them in a Red Cross tent, and they were bundled into blankets for the journey to a hospital.

YOUNG MEN IN HURRY

Heart Researchers Urge Slower Pace

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Heart researchers wagged a warning finger Friday at young men in a hurry.

They are more likely to get heart attacks before 50 because they are hard-driving, aggressive, competitive, very ambitious, and living under constant deadline pressures, said Drs. Ray Rosenman and Myer Friedman of San Francisco.

This kind of personality and behavior can identify the "coronary candidate" with greater accuracy than measurements of fats and cholesterol in their blood, the physicians said. But they also said the blood-fat levels are useful in detecting susceptibility to heart attacks.

Rosenman presented to the American Heart Association a preliminary report on a long-term study aimed at finding the best "predictors" of future heart attacks and attempts to find what really causes the nation's alarming rate of heart disease.

In a news conference, he and other specialists agreed several things in our way of life apparently are involved—blood fats, rich diet, heavy smoking, personality, tensions and high blood pressure.

They debated the problem of determining just how important each factor is in bringing on the underlying artery disease, an accumulation of fatty "gunk" inside arteries, as Dr. William Kannel of Framingham, Mass., phrased it.

A significant role for personality and behavior turned up in a continuing study of 3,524 men, aged 39 to 59, employed by 11 California corporations, Rosenman said.

In initial examinations, about half were listed as "the doers and drivers, rather than the driven," he said, and he and Friedman predicted they face more risk of coronaries than less ambitious men. The predictions were filed away for a medical referee to consult later.

GOP Rights Plan Fails To Stir Demos

Judiciary Group Suspicious Of Political Trap

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Republican proposal aimed at obtaining a breakthrough on civil rights legislation stirred little interest among Democrats Friday.

The administration declined even to acknowledge there was such a thing, although one of its GOP sponsors insisted both the White House and the Justice Department had been made aware of it.

Among Democrats on the House Judiciary Committee, where the fight over a bill is building up to a climax, there were suspicions of a political trap.

'HARMONY' MOVE

The proposal, advanced Thursday by some Republican Judiciary Committee members, calls for President Kennedy to embrace a GOP bill and offer it as a "harmony" measure.

The Republicans also want Kennedy to make a public announcement crediting the GOP with authorship of the bill.

Despite its obvious political overtones the proposal calls for a legislative package that closely parallels what the administration is seeking.

It would cover voting rights, public accommodations, school desegregation, federal intervention in civil rights cases, and creation of a community relations service to mediate racial disputes. Only the latter provision would be taken bodily from the administration's bill.

Rep. Clark MacGregor, R-Minn., who helped draw up the proposal, said it is not offered on a take-it-or-leave-it basis, but as something on which negotiations can be based.

"We've got to get off dead center," he said. "Everybody says what he won't take in a civil rights bill. I think it's time people say what they will take."

Women Urged To Throw Out Smoked Fish

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration Friday urged housewives to destroy any smoked fish products they may have under refrigeration unless it is known the product did not come from fish caught in the Great Lakes or processed in Great Lakes area plants.

Canned fish products are not involved, the FDA said. The smoked-fish products involved are those that are packaged in sealed plastic wrappers and those that are sold in bulk without any package or wrapper, the FDA explained.

Commissioner George P. Larrick said this emergency measure is necessary "in view of the deadly nature of botulism poisoning and the occurrence of seven deaths in the last few weeks from botulism associated with smoked whitefish and chubs produced in the Great Lakes area."

Hurricane No. 8 Born In Ocean

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The season's eighth tropical storm, Helena, formed Friday over Atlantic waters 1,500 miles southeast of Miami while No. 7, Hurricane Ginny, still was spinning off the Carolinas.

Forecasters at San Juan, Puerto Rico, said on the basis of land, vessel and aircraft reports that Helena was hauling top winds of 50 miles per hour west-northwest from a 5 p.m. location 125 miles east of Dominica in the midst of the Leeward-Windward Islands forming the eastern boundary of the Caribbean Sea.

Gale warnings were ordered at once from St. Lucia in the Windwards north to St. Kitts and Antigua in the Leewards.

Northeast's $2.9-Million Needs Cited

Dr. George T. Walker outlined $2.9-million in capital outlay needs Friday for Northeast Louisiana State College ranging from classroom facilities to additional land.

The college president, addressing the Monroe Optimist Club, said Northeast had enjoyed the "greatest numerical growth" of any state college for the past three years.

FUTURE OUTLOOK

Northeast has increased to an enrollment of 3,639, but Dr. Walker noted that the National Association of Registrars projects an enrollment of 7,500 students by 1978.

He said he described the projection of increasing college enrollments as a "very conservative estimate," pointing out that the association estimates a 187 per cent increase in the number of college students.

With Northeast growing, Dr. Walker emphasized the college's plans to expand on about 60 acres of land bought recently across Bayou DeSiard from the present campus.

But he listed additional land in a breakdown of capital outlay needs that included the following:

1. A bridge across Bayou DeSiard to the new campus area.
2. Renovation of a library building for classroom use.
3. Tennis courts, softball fields, baseball field and other athletic facilities.
4. An ROTC dormitory and three ROTC buildings.
5. Removal of the present

Friday's high was a pleasant 87 degrees around 2 p.m. while the low was registered at 59 during the pre-dawn hours.

Navy Carrier To Cruise On Regular Power

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara turned down Friday the Navy's request for atomic power in its new carrier, ordering instead that the big ship use conventional power.

He said he did this to avoid further delay in building the ship and that his action does not prejudice another question of nuclear power for Navy surface ships in the future.

McNamara referred to the question of cost difference for the two power plants. With conventional power, the estimated cost for the carrier is $310 million, but with nuclear power the cost would be at least $125 million more.

The Navy, led by Secretary Fred Korth, had asked McNamara to withdraw a previous tentative decision against the nuclear carrier. McNamara agreed to this, saying that he would meet with Korth again after the latter's return from a 10-day visit to a hospital. Korth came back to the Pentagon Thursday.

PARADE ROUTE
The parade will start from Riverside Drive and proceed to West Monroe across the Louisville Avenue bridge, down Trenton Street through West Monroe's business district and back across the river on the DeSiard Street bridge into downtown Monroe, where it will end at Sixth and DeSiard.

Twenty-one organizations have entered cars and floats for the parade, according to Chairman Maj. George E. Sanders, and twelve residence units will be decorated for viewing, including the three off-campus fraternity houses.

John Pennel, Northeast's great pole vaulter, will ride in the lead car of the parade, according to homecoming co-chairman.

Rickover Criticizes Reform In Schools

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice Adm. Hyman G. Rickover, a hardy perennial among education critics, said Friday recent reforms in the public schools have barely scratched the surface of the problem.

"It is true," he said, "that under outside pressure, curriculum—especially for the college preparatory course—are being toughened here and there, and various new gimmicks are being tried out, but I venture to say that only one student in a thousand has so far been affected by any serious reform."

"The life-adjustment people are still in the saddle," Rickover, in a speech prepared for the annual meeting for the Council for Basic Education, aimed his sharpest barbs at what he called "the snail's pace, the incredible stretch-out, in American education."

"The plain fact is," he said, "that the educational value of a school year is at least a third higher (in European countries) than here. Our children sit in class more years because they learn less each year."

"It is that simple," Rickover said that because of the superiority of European education "it is not surprising that Europe has a shortage of unskilled workers and must import foreigners to do common labor. In contrast we have a surplus; we have a mass of young people so deficient in mental and manual skills that no advanced society could provide them all with jobs, except on a charity basis."

"Their tragedy makes a mockery of our constant boast that we are the best educated, most literate people on earth."

To reduce the stretch-out, Rickover suggested lengthening the school day and the school year, eliminating all extracurricular activities during school hours and leaving the teacher undisturbed in the classroom.

Monroe will be the host city for the 1964 Miss Louisiana Beauty Pageant. The Monroe Junior Chamber of Commerce accepted the franchise to sponsor the event in a special called meeting Friday night.

Commenting after a unanimous vote of the membership in favor of undertaking the project, Jaycee President Jack Murphy described the organization as "very enthusiastic and very happy Monroe has been chosen the host city."

The Miss Louisiana Pageant, a preliminary of the Miss America finals, formerly was staged in Lake Providence. The franchise was withdrawn last week, however, in a letter to the Lake Providence Jaycees from Lenora Slaughter, executive director of the Miss America Pageant.

According to Murphy, the pageant was awarded to the city of Monroe in preference to other Louisiana cities by the Miss America Pageant Committee at Atlantic City, N.J.

In a letter under the same cover with a franchise agreement, Miss Slaughter wrote Murphy of her "delight to know the Monroe Jaycees are so well equipped to direct the pageant."

Dallas Reacts With Shock At Adlai Incidents

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas reacted with shock Friday after a young man spat upon Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson and a woman struck him — by accident, she said — with a sign on a stick.

The incidents came Thursday night as about 100 persons milled about Stevenson U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, after he concluded a speech marking United Nations Day.

Police arrested Robert Edward Hatfield, 22, of the suburb of Irving and prepared charges of aggravated assault. The maximum sentence on conviction is two years in jail.

Policeman R. L. Larson said Hatfield spat upon him and the ambassador.

City Councilman W.H. Rober said, "This was the conduct of an ill-advised and ridiculous group which has given the city of Dallas a national black eye."

Robert Cullum, president of the Chamber of Commerce said, "All of us are feeling shame."

Stevenson, heavily guarded in his hotel and as he went to his airplane Friday, said, "I've never had a more enthusiastic reception than in Dallas. I regret the violent behavior of a few after a speech on peace, which creates a disturbing and false impression here and abroad, but it was a few."

Police arrested Robert Edward Hatfield, 22, of the suburb of Irving and prepared charges of aggravated assault. The maximum sentence on conviction is two years in jail.

Policeman R. L. Larson said Hatfield spat upon him and the ambassador.

City Councilman W.H. Rober said, "This was the conduct of an ill-advised and ridiculous group which has given the city of Dallas a national black eye."

Robert Cullum, president of the Chamber of Commerce said, "All of us are feeling shame." Stevenson, heavily guarded in his hotel and as he went to his airplane Friday, said, "I've never had a more enthusiastic reception than in Dallas. I regret the violent behavior of a few after a speech on peace, which creates a disturbing and false impression here and abroad, but it was a few."

AT BANQUET HERE Home Builders Install Officers

Installation of new officers, followed by a banquet and dance Friday night, was the highlight of the 1963 state convention of the Home Builders Association of Louisiana, which winds up here today.

More than 200 delegates and their wives participated in the last night program, held on the roof of the Frances Hotel. The convention started its three-day run here on Thursday.

Speaker at the banquet was Vondal S. Gravelle of Birmingham, Ala. Gravelle is vice president of the National Association of Home Builders. "Why I belong to NAHB" was the subject of his talk.

Outgoing state president A. Lee Booth of Monroe turned over his gavel to the newly-elected Jack Dewald of Lake Charles. Other 1963-64 officials are Hab Monsour, Alexandria, first vice president; Buddy Eanes, Baton Rouge, second vice president; Frank Boimare Jr., New Orleans, secretary; and Harry Hebert, Lafayette, treasurer.

Dewald presented Booth with a plaque from the chapter for his service as president throughout the past year, and returned the gavel, allowing him to preside over the remainder of the program.

Several times during the evening, Tommy Bond of Monroe presented name-drawings for door prizes. Performing the actual drawing of the cards was Miss Julia Ann Wilhite, Miss Northeast State College, who served as honorary hostess for the banquet.

Mrs. Adell Brown of Bastrop won the grand prize of the evening — a plaque featuring an outline of a house surrounding a Home Builders symbol. Helping to form the house were 50 shining silver dollars.

In his speech, Gravelle listed the services available to members of the National Association of Home Builders and urged all builders attending the convention to help promote new members.

"Operating through the large membership of this group provides many benefits and protections, not enjoyed by individuals," the national vice president pointed out.

He cited the numerous committees attached to NAHB that speak for member builders to Congress, labor and many other organizations.

"Business management is a very important factor to any builder, even though he may not be as familiar with it as he is with construction," Gravelle said. NAHB sponsors several schools to help members with problems of this type.

He also recommended the advice available at national headquarters, and requested any interested member to write in for help with technical difficulties, market analyses, and other such problems.

A thorough research institute is constantly working to help the progress of the building industry, Gravelle continued. This division experiments with and reports on any new innovation in the field.

Gravelle urged all delegates to attend the annual convention of NAHB to be held in Chicago.

The vice president concluded his speech with the statement that the national organization must continue to have good local leadership if it is to prosper. "It is like any other organization — the more time and effort you put into it, the more you will learn and benefit from it."

Last day activities will begin with an "earlybirds coffee" at 9:30 a.m. today in the Gold Room.

State treasurer Buddy Eanes will serve as the moderator for two morning panel discussions. A Federal Housing Administration panel, starting talks at 9:45 a.m., will be composed of O. P. Heffington, regional direc-

What day of the week was Sept. 2, 1914, on and was that day Labor Day?

Sept. 2, 1914, was on Monday and since it was the first Monday of the month, we presume it was Labor Day. Congress passed a law June 28, 1894, officially making the first Monday of September a national holiday.

I had furniture made over and it ran to approximately $150. Most of that was charged to labor. Should they charge me sales tax on the $150, or should it be broken down to whatever the material cost.

Sales tax is charged on labor in Louisiana, according to Fred Ussery Jr., acting district manager of the Louisiana Department of Revenue. He added that whether or not the materials were taxable depended on their use in the repair work. He cited Article 2-85, "Repairs to Tangible Personal Property," from the rules and regulations of Louisiana General Sales Tax, to further explain the statute:

"Charges for repairs to tangible personal property such as automobiles, clothing, watches, jewelry, shoes, tires, motors, household appliances, industrial machinery, etc. are taxable as sales of services. Materials and parts purchased by repair men for the use in repairing tangible personal property for others are bought for resale and must be purchased under a resale certificate, where such materials and parts will become a part of the articles to be repaired. Supplies which are consumed in the process of performing repair services without becoming part of the articles repaired are consumed by the repair men, and they should pay the tax thereon to the vendors from whom such supplies are purchased."

The opinion states in part, "where there are two or more officers of the same kind of character to be elected, such as two or more representatives to the House of Representatives, each elector shall vote for as many candidates as there are places to be filled. Government, AMA Team Up To Assail Health Quackery

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The government and the American Medical Association (AMA) joined forces Friday in assailing health quackery which a cabinet official charged is a billion dollar a year business that sometimes brings death to gullible victims.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Anthony J. Celebrezze told the second annual National Congress on Medical Quackery that the buyer of fake cures and useless treatments "is not only fleeced of the price of a nostrum... but is also deprived of considerable benefits of modern medicine."

The meeting drew counterfire from a rival conference, the National Congress on Health Monopoly, sponsored by the National Health Federation (NHF).

At that meeting, Miles Robinson, a former instructor at Vanderbilt medical school and the University of Pennsylvania, accused the AMA of trying to impose conformity on medical practitioners.

He said: "Never before in the history of the world has there been such quackery on such a wholesale and respectable appearing scale."

But what can you expect from the AMA since it gets about half its income from drug advertisements in its many journals.

George P. Larrick, food & drug commissioner, cited the "one of a number of so-called health and nutrition organizations which are not all that they claim to be."

He said the NHF's insistence on freedom of choice in treatments would "promote eccentric, unproved medicines and treatments."

Government, AMA Team Up To Assail Health Quackery

WASHINGTON (UPI) —The government and the American Medical Association (AMA) joined forces Friday in assailing health quackery which a cabinet official charged is a billion dollar a year business that sometimes brings death to gullible victims.

Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Anthony J. Celebrezze told the second annual National Congress on Medical Quackery that the buyer of fake cures and useless treatments "is not only fleeced of the price of a nostrum... but is also deprived of considerable benefits of modern medicine."

The meeting drew counterfire from a rival conference, the National Congress on Health Monopoly, sponsored by the National Health Federation (NHF).

At that meeting, Miles Robinson, a former instructor at Vanderbilt medical school and the University of Pennsylvania, accused the AMA of trying to impose conformity on medical practitioners.

He said: "Never before in the history of the world has there been such quackery on such a wholesale and respectable appearing scale."

But what can you expect from the AMA since it gets about half its income from drug advertisements in its many journals."

George P. Larrick, food & drug commissioner, cited the National Health Federation as "one of a number of so-called health and nutrition organizations which are not all that they claim to be."

He said the NHF's insistence on freedom of choice in treatments would "promote eccentric, unproved medicines and treatments."

Need For Leadership

Looking south of the border, we see regard for the United States on the decline. Cuba is now a Soviet base, Brazil holds the dismal prospect of becoming a "second Cuba" within two or three years, and Mexico is said to have arrested students who wanted to demonstrate against Yugoslavia's dictator Tito.

The general impression spreading across Latin America is that the United States is still more of an interventionist than officials care to admit and that when it intervenes it bungles matters badly.

Cuba has held up a mirror to U.S. foreign policymaking all the way from the downfall of Batista to the Bay of Pigs and the Russian missile buildup. The reflection is not good nor even consistent.

Following the assassination of Dominican dictator Trujillo, the United States gave support to Juan Bosch, a liberal exile who was billed as an anti-communist. Bosch carried elections by a big vote. But once in power, he proved inadequate and was swept out of the picture by a military junta.

Like many U.S. statements regarding Latin American governments, Bosch took the anti-wealthy position. Once in office, he found that people with influence, rank and money considered him a person apart. He was thus a leader without power who could not keep his political promises to the masses.

It may have developed so because of the attitude of the wealthy in the Dominican Republic. But during his tenure of office, he turned out to be softer towards the communists than had been anticipated. Here again, U.S. political intelligence — as was the case in Cuba — proved it was hardly worthy of the name.

The result was that the Reds — probably guided from Havana — took every possible advantage of Bosch's tolerance. He fell to a bloodless military coup only seven months after taking office and is now, as before, in exile.

The United States knew the military takeover was coming before it became a matter of fact on September 25. But Washington did not wish to enter the picture.

From all outward signs, the new regime is acting under constitutional law. It is not a democracy in that no free elections have been scheduled. But certainly the uprising by the military was a step away from communism.

But the United States continues to oppose the new government. This opposition comes through clearly in the refusal to recognize the present Dominican government. On the same side are the Bosch and pro-Castro parties.

Now what can a Dominican or other Latin American citizen think? Those who thought the United States was decidedly an anti-communist nation are bewildered. When United States official policy revealed itself to be fully opposed to the new anti-communist three-man junta, there were Latin cries of "stupid and unbelievable."

Above the surface, it appears that our policy dealing with Central and South American countries is a patchwork quilt put together by the Kennedy brothers, the State Department, the Pentagon, the Alliance for Progress and the Central Intelligence Agency.

Together, these plans form a weak piece of bridgework with one end resting on what the administration thinks the U.S. public will support and the other on a hasty digest of Latin American problems.

Dominican Foreign Minister Donald Reid Cabral said recently:

"What we need in Latin America is a standard strategy for political development, together with the political tactics for its execution."

Not only does the Alliance for Progress avoid the outlining of such a standard strategy for political development in Central and South America. The United States has avoided thinking in terms of workable, representative governments for the countries of Latin America since the Spanish-American War.

They Fade And Die

Shortly after General Douglas MacArthur was pulled out of South Korea because he wanted to win the war against North Korea and Red China, and former President Harry Truman wouldn't let him, he made the oft-quoted observation: "Old soldiers don't die; they just fade away."

Now the Institute of Community Studies in London has come up with the statement that widowers not only fade away but that they also die — at a rate 40 per cent higher in the first six months after their wives die than other men in the same age group.

The institute offered five reasons: 1. Desolation; grief for the wife can cause changes in the endocrine and central nervous systems which can impair health. 2. Homogamy — the tendency of the fit to marry the fit and the unfit to marry the unfit, a phenomenon often observed by doctors —

Sharing The Treats

With a "Share-the-Treats" program going into effect here this year, Halloween will take on an additional meaning. The project is strictly local and has received the endorsement of at least one civic club.

Ben Weingart, president of the North Monroe Kiwanis Club, outlines the plan as follows:

"We want to develop a community-wide program to collect excess confections from children who take part in 'trick-or-treat' celebrations and distribute the 'loot' to deserving local groups."

The program will be carried out on November 1, when children of the Monroe city elementary schools, Lakeshore Elementary School and Good Shepherd School will bring their excess confections to school and deposit them in receptacles provided.

Halloween has always been a gay time of the year. Some years which means that when one spouse dies it is time for the other to die also. 3. Common infection; both spouses may die from the same infectious disease. 4. An unfavorable environment which brought about the death of one spouse might do the same for the other. 5. Lack of care; widowers may become undernourished when they do not have their wives to look after them.

Three possible ways for widowers to prolong their lives were suggested. One was that they make a special effort to prolong the lives of their wives and thus of themselves. Another was that, deprived of solicitous care, they should look after their own health more carefully. A third was they might remarry sooner. Doing that, they would have to run counter to the kind of etiquette that says they must wait at least a year — but who thinks of etiquette when he is about to be hit by an automobile.

ago the occasion grew a little too happy at times with acts of vandalism cropping up instead of milder forms of fun.

Now, "trick-or-treat" safaris by youngsters have pushed vandalism virtually out of the picture. The "share-the-treats" idea was thought of as a means of keeping the candy from becoming too much of a good thing.

In addition, sponsoring groups feel that by having elementary school children bring their overflow treats to school for distribution to the needy, the kids will learn something of giving and receiving.

We are favorably inclined towards the completely local aspects of the "share-the-treats" program, never having thought that Halloween was geared for world-wide, earthshaking projects administered by the United Nations.

Robert Kennedy Demands More Negroes In His Bureau

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Robert Kennedy is stepping up his civil rights crusade by taking it directly into his own department.

The President's brother is demanding more Negroes be employed there.

"Recruit them if necessary," he has sternly ordered his top lieutenants.

This forceful edict was laid down by young Kennedy at a two-hour meeting with the heads of Justice Department divisions, sections, bureaus and other agencies. He told them he had been studying the department's personnel rolls and had found that of its more than 31,000 employees, less than 10 per cent are Negroes.

"That's not enough," declared Kennedy. "We can't be pressing Congress for enactment of civil rights legislation and urging private industry to employ more Negroes, when we aren't doing our share along that line. I want you to give immediate consideration to bringing more Negroes into the Department, not only here in Washington but throughout the country."

"RECRUIT them if necessary. But get them. It goes without saying they must be qualified. That's absolutely essential. We're not letting down any bars on that score. But this department must have more qualified Negroes in every category on its rolls, and I want prompt action on that."

Kennedy also has directed U.S. Attorneys to keep a close eye on racial disturbances in their jurisdictions. He personally telephoned the U.S. Attorney in Chicago for a report on the explosive situation there.

Two of the Attorney General's sons — Joseph II, and Robert Jr., 9 — have been enrolled in an integrated private school operated by the Society of Friends (Quakers). It has eight Negroes in a student body of more than 250. The two Kennedy boys are transported daily in a chauffeur-driven car from their home in Virginia to the school in Washington.

ONE OF Attorney General Kennedy's assistants, for whom he wangled an appointment as a Federal Trade Commissioner, faces sharp questioning on wiretapping when his confirmation is considered by the Senate Commerce Committee.

James R. Reilly, chief of the Executive Office for United States Attorneys, will be grilled on this at the instigation of Washington attorney James Laughlin. Laughlin represented a defendant in a case that was thrown out of court because the government's principal evidence had been obtained by wiretapping.

Kennedy claims his department does not resort to this means of getting evidence. He asserted that flatly in a letter to Representative John Moss, D-Calif., chairman of the special committee investigating government censorship.

"The Department of Justice," wrote the President's brother, "does not use recorders wired into telephone circuits, or induction type attachments, or types of instruments that could be used to monitor or record telephone conversations. That is the fixed policy of the department."

The Commerce Committee, headed by Senator Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., proposes to closely interrogate Reilly about this. He has been in charge of U.S. Attorney activities.

At a conference with Justice Department chiefs, Kennedy was very critical of the "bad publicity" that had resulted from this rebuff. He said the embarrassing disclosures were hurting his chances of obtaining the wiretapping legislation he has long been trying to put through Congress.

Kennedy also talked bluntly to Acheson about the affair.

REILLY is the latest assistant young Kennedy has installed in a key government office. He has built up a considerable "empire" of such appointees. It includes all major government agencies, and amounts to a personal organization of far-reaching scope and influence.

VICE PRESIDENT Lyndon Johnson is shortly going to Europe again — this time with the mission of furthering President Kennedy's strategy of trying to "isolate" President De Gaulle.

Johnson is leaving late next week for a visit to the Benelux countries — Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. During this jaunt, he will make two major addresses — at The Hague and in Amsterdam on November 7 and 8. Both talks are being written in the State Department for personal scrutiny by the President.

In these speeches, Johnson will expound the administration's trade and agricultural policies as they relate to the Common Market, where they are under fire, chiefly by the French.

On this trip, Johnson will ostensibly bypass France. That is being done despite the strong recommendation of Ambassador Charles Bohlen that Johnson make a stop in Paris for a talk with De Gaulle. The President himself turned that down.

THIS WILL be the third time that he and Johnson have been in Europe this year and pointedly avoided De Gaulle.

During the President's spring trip to Europe he bypassed France. Johnson did the same last month when he toured the Scandinavian countries. And he will do it again on his impending Benelux trip.

This public cold-shouldering of De Gaulle is part of a carefully calculated administration policy of attempting to "isolate" him from the other European powers.

At one White House meeting on this matter, it was proposed that funds of the Central Intelligence Agency be used to finance French labor and political opposition to De Gaulle. Nothing was done about this plan.

After Johnson returns from Europe, he is slated to fly to Los Angeles to preside at a November 14 conference on unemployment and racial problems.

Representatives of so-called minority groups from six states will attend — California, Arizona, Colorado, Texas, New Mexico and Nevada. Among those participating will be Negroes, Indians, Chinese, and Spanish-Americans.

The President will send a message, and Johnson and other administration officials will speak.

try for governor again after determining not to try to unseat Republican Senator Roman Hrusko. The "adjournment" date for this session of Congress is now set for December 22. That's what Senate and House leaders have privately agreed on. In effect, it means the session will continue for the remainder of the year and take a lay-off for the year-end holidays before re-convening after New Year's Day. For Thanksgiving, Congress will take a three-day recess.

Senator Soaper Says

In dealing with the communists you don't have to worry about the fine print in the treaties. You're luck if they pay any attention to the stuff in the big, boldface type.

Ninety years ago, the first American football rules were written. Before that, everybody understood the game.

Our diplomats are said to be handicapped by their limited funds for entertaining in foreign capitals. But isn't it much more gracious the way we do it? — Giving the other countries money so they can give parties of their own.

Tilly has no trouble keeping America's two great sports separate. Baseball players are the ones who shave; football players are the ones who comb their hair.

We hope that mothers will retain those high-style hats that they buy this fall. In a year or two they'll make wonderfully spooky additions to the kid's Halloween costumes.

District of Columbia laws forbidding kite-flying and the sale of ice cream cones will soon be repealed. Which shows where a youthful administration's interest lies.

The old grad bears no grudges. "The history professor flunked me in my sophomore year," he says, "but I don't let that stop me from parking in his driveway when I go to the football game."

It's a time of soul-searching in the American League as nine managers try to figure out how they were able to lose so many games to the Yankees.

A science items informs us that mail sent to the planet Pluto at a speed of 25,000 miles an hour would take 13 years to get there. So it wouldn't be the best place to live if you wanted to read the current sports news.

Tilly is interested in the Bossa Nova and the Cosa Nostra but she keeps getting confused as to which is which.

The attorney general wants a wiretap law, but in our experience 90 per cent of telephone conversations consists of teenagers saying "hmm" or "yeah."

"Honesty," says Congressman Sludgepump, "is not only the best policy, but sometimes it's even good politics."

RALPH DE TOLEDANO

Facts Withheld On Cuban Storm

It will be a long time before the world knows just how hard Hurricane Flora struck Cuba. Fidel Castro has tried, for strategic reasons, to minimize the toll in life and property. However, in its time of great travail, the curtain of secrecy which surrounds the island has been opened. And we now know that Cuba, already devastated by the ruthless Communist locusts, has now been ravaged by the elements.

Right after Flora, Dictator Castro communicated with local leaders. Alert U.S. Intelligence operatives were able to monitor these communications. To Major Jorge Risquet, military commander of Oriente province, Castro said agitatedly, "The situation that I have been able to grasp is incredible, incredible for the proportions of the floods. This is something unprecedented. The magnitude of the damage in human lives cannot be estimated. The magnitude of the damage cannot really be calculated."

RISQUET later reported to Fidel Castro that "two villages where more than 4,000 students and workers were harvesting coffee have been totally demolished by the waters and we despair of their lives."

Free Cuba News, through its Intelligence network, estimates carefully the extent of the property damage: 100 per cent of the cocoa crop; 70 per cent of rice; 70 per cent of vegetables; 65 per cent of coffee; 60 per cent of corn; 60 per cent of cotton; 50 per cent of sugar; and 50 per cent of bananas.

Before Castro seized power, Cuba had 5.4 million head of cattle. Communist mismanagement had brought the figure down to 2.2 million head of cattle. The hurricane added losses conservatively estimated at 300,000 head. Industry in Oriente was equally hard hit. Official reports to Castro informed him that every industrial plant was either seriously damaged or demolished. The mines were flooded. In two provinces, 80 per cent of the housing was either leveled or made uninhabitable.

All of this, it should be noted, came at a time when agriculture and industry in what was once the third most prosperous nation in Latin America (from a per capita standpoint) had begun to grind to a halt. Life was on a subsistence level, with the possibility of starvation lurking around the corner. Castro then blamed his difficulties on "saboteurs" and the "Yanqui imperialists."

THE MISERY of that tragic island should have been turned, at the critical moment, into a means for bringing liberation and peace to its people. An American government not tied down by the sorry limitations of a sordid ideological position would have thrown open the gates of the Navy base at Guantanamo and said to the people of Cuba, "There is food and clothing for you here. Come and get it." U.S. Navy ships, equally provisioned, might have anchored off the shores of Cuba while our medium and long wave radios informed the people that they came bearing help. The pressure on Fidel Castro to invite them into his harbors would have been tremendous — and this might have been the opening wedge.

NOTE THAT I do not say we should simply have shipped food, clothing, and medical supplies into the island. This would have achieved nothing — either for us or for the Cuban people. We should have offered to deliver it personally — in full view of every Cuban starving for food and freedom.

DR. PETER J. STEINCROHN

Confused Opinions Can Upset Patient

Few things upset a patient more than a difference of opinion about his condition. When doctors disagree how is the frustrated patient to know just what is what? The following letter is an example:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: About 18 years ago a heart defect prompted a doctor to advise me to have my children only by Caesarian. I had two children by operation.

During the years that followed, this doctor, a well-known cardiologist, has kept watch over me and I followed his advice carefully. As a result, I have reached my early fifties with a healthy mental attitude and with very few physical upheavals.

RECENTLY this doctor passed away. Thinking the wisest course would be to consult a heart specialist, I made an appointment with one of apparent high standing in our community. This specialist merely listened to my heart without benefit of any instrument. He said he couldn't understand why I had to have my children by section, and intimated I was being neurotic about it all.

He told me to go home and forget about it and get a job to keep busy (I am a nursery teacher). Had my old doctor been wrong all these years? How can any specialist tell for certain the condition of a person's heart without taking X-rays, electrocardiograms and making other tests? I am really mixed up and lost. You can understand how I miss my old anchor. — Mrs. T.

COMMENT: People who have depended so much on one doctor through the years, and have at last lost him, will understand how Mrs. T. feels. Such a loss is not easily replaced. The feeling is intensified when one receives a medical opinion which is exactly opposite to the one which the patient has lived with for years. Take your case, Mrs. T., as an example.

Of course, I can't tell you whether or not you have heart disease. Your old doctor may have been right or wrong. But if I had to vote, I'd favor the one who was patient and careful; I don't see how a modern cardiologist can be sure of his diagnosis by listening only for a few minutes with the stethoscope and making his pronouncement.

RATHER than live in apprehension and confusion, I suggest, Mrs. T., that you seek a third opinion as soon as you can. When you call for your appointment ask to speak to the doctor and explain your predicament. He will be especially careful in his examination so that he can make the proper decision. At that time you will have your diagnosis and abide by it. That's about all you can do now.

(Send for my leaflet, "Maybe Your Heart Trouble's Imaginary." Write to me, in care of this newspaper, enclosing 15 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Nine months ago when my baby was born his belly button was protruding about one-half inch. To this day it is still protruding. I have shown this to the doctor, but he has shown no concern over it. Would you please advise me if this is serious? Will it eventually go away? — Mrs. A.

Comment: I am as unconcerned about it as your own doctor. Eventually these problems solve themselves. In a few months it is likely to disappear as the youngster's abdominal muscles grow stronger.

"Recruit them if necessary," he has sternly ordered his top lieutenants.

This forceful edict was laid down by young Kennedy at a two-hour meeting with the heads of Justice Department divisions, sections, bureaus and other agencies. He told them he had been studying the department's personnel rolls and had found that of its more than 31,000 employees, less than 10 per cent are Negroes.

"That's not enough," declared Kennedy. "We can't be pressing Congress for enactment of civil rights legislation and urging private industry to employ more Negroes, when we aren't doing our share along that line. I want you to give immediate consideration to bringing more Negroes into the Department, not only here in Washington but throughout the country."

"RECRUIT them if necessary. But get them. It goes without saying they must be qualified. That's absolutely essential. We're not letting down any bars on that score. But this department must have more qualified Negroes in every category on its rolls, and I want prompt action on that."

Kennedy also has directed U.S. Attorneys to keep a close eye on racial disturbances in their jurisdictions. He personally telephoned the U.S. Attorney in Chicago for a report on the explosive situation there.

Two of the Attorney General's sons — Joseph 11, and Robert Jr., 9 — have been enrolled in an integrated private school operated by the Society of Friends (Quakers). It has eight Negroes in a student body of more than 250. The two Kennedy boys are transported daily in a chauffeured car from their home in Virginia to the school in Washington.

ONE of Attorney General Kennedy's assistants, for whom he wangled an appointment as a Federal Trade Commissioner, faces sharp questioning on wiretapping when his confirmation is considered by the Senate Commerce Committee.

James R. Reilly, chief of the Executive Office for United States Attorneys, will be grilled on this at the instigation of Washington attorney James Laughlin. Laughlin represented a defendant in a case that was thrown out of court because the government's principal evidence had been obtained by wiretapping.

Kennedy claims his department does not resort to this means of getting evidence. He asserted that flatly in a letter to Representative John Moss, D-Calif., chairman of the special committee investigating government censorship.

"The Department of Justice," wrote the President's brother, "does not use recorders wired into telephone circuits, or induction type attachments, or types of instruments that could be used to monitor or record telephone conversations. That is the fixed policy of the department."

The Commerce Committee, headed by Senator Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., proposes to closely interrogate Reilly about this. He has been in charge of U.S. Attorney activities.

At a conference with Justice Department chiefs, Kennedy was very critical of the "bad publicity" that had resulted from this rebuff. He said the embarrassing disclosures were hurting his chances of obtaining the wiretapping legislation he has long been trying to put through Congress.

Kennedy also talked bluntly to Acheson about the affair.

REILLY is the latest assistant young Kennedy has installed in a key government office. He has built up a considerable "empire" of such appointees. It includes all major government agencies, and amounts to a personal organization of far-reaching scope and influence.

VICE PRESIDENT Lyndon Johnson is shortly going to Europe again — this time with the mission of furthering President Kennedy's strategy of trying to "isolate" President De Gaulle.

Johnson is leaving late next week for a visit to the Benelux countries — Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. During this jaunt, he will make two major addresses — at the Hague and in Amsterdam on November 7 and 8. Both talks are being written in the State Department for personal scrutiny by the President.

In these speeches, Johnson will expound the administration's trade and agricultural policies as they relate to the Common Market, where they are under fire, chiefly by the French.

On this trip, Johnson will ostentatiously bypass France. That is being done despite the strong recommendation of Ambassador Charles Bohlen that Johnson make a stop in Paris for a talk with De Gaulle. The President himself turned that down.

THIS WILL be the third time that he and Johnson have been in Europe this year and pointedly avoided De Gaulle.

During the President's spring trip to Europe he bypassed France. Johnson did the same last month when he toured the Scandinavian countries. And he will do it again on his impending Benelux trip.

This public cold-shouldering of De Gaulle is part of a carefully calculated administration policy of attempting to "isolate" him from the other European powers.

At one White House meeting on this matter, it was proposed that funds of the Central Intelligence Agency be used to finance French labor and political opposition to De Gaulle. Nothing was done about this plan.

After Johnson returns from Europe, he is slated to fly to Los Angeles to preside at a November 14 conference on unemployment and racial problems.

Representatives of so-called minority groups from six states will attend — California, Arizona, Colorado, Texas, New Mexico and Nevada. Among those participating will be Negroes, Indians, Chinese, and Spanish-Americans.

The President will send a message, and Johnson and other administration officials will speak.

GOVERNOR Frank Morrison, D-Neb., will seek a third term. He will announce that on November 1. Morrison decided to try for governor again after determining not to try to unseat Republican Senator Roman Hrusko. The "adjournment" date for this session of Congress is now set for December 22. That's what Senate and House leaders have privately agreed on. In effect, it means the session will continue for the remainder of the year and take a lay-off for the year-end holidays before re-convening after New Year's Day. For Thanksgiving, Congress will take a three-day recess.

Senator Soaper Says

In dealing with the communists you don't have to worry about the fine print in the treaties. You're luck if they pay any attention to the stuff in the big, boldface type.

Ninety years ago, the first American football rules were written. Before that, everybody understood the game.

Our diplomats are said to be handicapped by their limited funds for entertaining in foreign capitals. But isn't it much more gracious the way we do it? — Giving the other countries money so they can give parties of their own.

Tilly has no trouble keeping America's two great sports separate. Baseball players are the ones who shave; football players are the ones who comb their hair.

We hope that mothers will retain those high-style hats that they buy this fall. In a year or two they'll make wonderfully spooky additions to the kid's Halloween costumes.

District of Columbia laws forbidding kite-flying and the sale of ice cream cones will soon be repealed. Which shows where a youthful administration's interest lies.

The old grad bears no grudges. "The history professor flunked me in my sophomore year," he says, "but I don't let that stop me from parking in his driveway when I go to the football game."

It's a time of soul-searching in the American League as nine managers try to figure out how they were able to lose so many games to the Yankees.

A science item informs us that mail sent to the planet Pluto at a speed of 25,000 miles an hour would take 13 years to get there. So it wouldn't be the best place to live if you wanted to read the current sports news.

Tilly is interested in the Bossa Nova and the Cosa Nostra but she keeps getting confused as to which is which.

The attorney general wants a wiretap law, but in our experience 90 per cent of telephone conversations consists of teenagers saying "hmm" or "yeah."

"Honesty," says Congressman Sludgepump, "is not only the best policy, but sometimes it's even good politics."

RALPH DE TOLEDANO

Facts Withheld On Cuban Storm

It will be a long time before the world knows just how hard Hurricane Flora struck Cuba. Fidel Castro has tried, for strategic reasons, to minimize the toll in life and property. However, in its time of great travail, the curtain of secrecy which surrounds the island has been opened. And we now know that Cuba, already devastated by the ruthless Communist locusts, has now been ravaged by the elements.

Right after Flora, Dictator Castro communicated with local leaders. Alert U.S. Intelligence operatives were able to monitor these communications. To Major Jorge Risquett, military commander of Oriente province, Castro said agitatedly, "The situation that I have been able to grasp is incredible, incredible for the proportions of the floods. This is something unprecedented. The magnitude of the damage in human lives cannot be estimated. The magnitude of the damage cannot really be calculated."

RISQUETT later reported to Fidel Castro that "two villages where more than 4,000 students and workers were harvesting coffee have been totally demolished by the waters and we despair of their lives."

Free Cuba News, through its Intelligence network, estimates carefully the extent of the property damage: 100 per cent of the cocoa crop; 70 per cent of rice; 70 per cent of vegetables; 65 per cent of coffee; 60 per cent of corn; 60 per cent of cotton; 50 per cent of sugar; and 50 per cent of bananas.

Before Castro seized power, Cuba had 5.4 million head of cattle. Communist mismanagement had brought the figure down to 2.2 million head of cattle. The hurricane added losses conservatively estimated at 300,000 head. Industry in Oriente was equally hard hit. Official reports to Castro informed him that every industrial plant was either seriously damaged or demolished. The mines were flooded. In two provinces, 90 per cent of the housing was either leveled or made uninhabitable.

All of this, it should be noted, came at a time when agriculture and industry in what was once the third most prosperous nation in Latin America (from a per capita standpoint) had begun to grind to a halt. Life was on a subsistence level, with the possibility of starvation lurking around the corner. Castro then blamed his difficulties on "saboteurs" and the "Yanqui imperialists."

THE MISERY of that tragic island should have been turned, at the critical moment, into a means for bringing liberation and peace to its people. An American government not tied down by the sorry limitations of a sordid ideological position would have thrown open the gates of the Navy base at Guantanamo and said to the people of Cuba, "There is food and clothing for you here. Come and get it." U.S. Navy ships, equally provisioned, might have anchored off the shores of Cuba while our medium and long wave radios informed the people that they came bearing help. The pressure on Fidel Castro to invite them into his harbors would have been tremendous — and this might have been the opening wedge.

NOTE THAT I do not say we should simply have shipped food, clothing, and medical supplies into the island. This would have achieved nothing — either for us or for the Cuban people. We should have offered to deliver it personally — in full view of every Cuban starving for food and freedom.

DR. PETER J. STEINCROHN

Confused Opinions Can Upset Patient

Few things upset a patient more than a difference of opinion about his condition. When doctors disagree how is the frustrated patient to know just what is what? The following letter is an example:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: About 18 years ago a heart defect prompted a doctor to advise me to have my children only by Caesarian. I had two children by operation.

During the years that followed, this doctor, a well-known cardiologist, has kept watch over me and I followed his advice carefully. As a result, I have reached my early fifties with a healthy mental attitude and with very few physical upheavals.

RECENTLY this doctor passed away. Thinking the wisest course would be to consult a heart specialist, I made an appointment with one of apparent high standing in our community. This specialist merely listened to my heart without benefit of any instrument. He said he couldn't understand why I had to have my children by section, and intimated I was being neurotic about it all.

He told me to go home and forget about it and get a job to keep busy (I am a nursery teacher). Had my old doctor been wrong all these years? How can any specialist tell for certain the condition of a person's heart without taking X-rays, electrocardiograms and making other tests? I am really mixed up and lost. You can understand how I miss my old anchor. — Mrs. T.

COMMENT: People who have depended so much on one doctor through the years, and have at last lost him, will understand how Mrs. T. feels. Such a loss is not easily replaced. The feeling is intensified when one receives a medical opinion which is exactly opposite to the one which the patient has lived with for years. Take your case, Mrs. T., as an example.

Of course, I can't tell you whether or not you have heart disease. Your old doctor may have been right or wrong. But if I had to vote, I'd favor the one who was patient and careful; I don't see how a modern cardiologist can be sure of his diagnosis by listening only for a few minutes with the stethoscope and making his pronouncement.

RATHER than live in apprehension and confusion, I suggest, Mrs. T., that you seek a third opinion as soon as you can. When you call for your appointment ask to speak to the doctor and explain your predicament. He will be especially careful in his examination so that he can make the proper decision. At that time you will have your diagnosis and abide by it. That's about all you can do now.

(Send for my leaflet, "Maybe Your Heart Trouble's Imaginary." Write to me, in care of this newspaper, enclosing 15 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Nine months ago when my baby was born his belly button was protruding about one-half inch. To this day it is still protruding. I have shown this to the doctor, but he has shown no concern over it. Would you please advise me if this is serious? Will it eventually go away? — Mrs. A.

Comment: I am as unconcerned about it as your own doctor. Eventually these problems solve themselves. In a few months it is likely to disappear as the youngster's abdominal muscles grow stronger.

Drought Cuts Water Supply

By United Press International
Precious water supplies dwindled, crop losses mounted and new forest fire perils arose Friday in the nation's vast drought zone.

Unseasonably mild weather held a grip on most of the parched area from the Mississippi Valley to New England and no relief was in sight for the hardest-hit Northeastern states.

The Delaware River ebbed to its lowest level in 30 years above Philadelphia. Worcester, Massachusetts' second largest city, and a batch of smaller communities used auxiliary supplies or borrowed from neighboring cities. Some Connecticut communities reported critical shortages.

The mercury climbed to a record 79 in Pittsburgh in the city's 43rd consecutive rainless day.

Smoke from eastern Kentucky fires drifted northward over Ohio in a 90-mile-wide band. The smog cut the visibility of forest patrol planes and fire tower wardens.

Dust blowing off bone-dry Indiana fields limited cut firetowermen's visibility from a normal 15 miles to about 1 1/2 miles. A Hoosier National Forest official at Bedford called on airplane pilots to aid in the vigil against fires.

Southern Illinois farmers counted a drought loss in the millions of dollars. In Fayette County alone, veteran farm adviser J. B. Turner said crop receipts would dip 20 per cent below the normal $14 million annual take.

In Clay County, Illinois, a farm adviser said the soybean crop is off 5 to 10 bushels per acre, pastures are completely gone and farmers "need another month of feed that they usually wouldn't have to buy."

Three Toledo, Ohio men were charged with stealing water from city hydrants. Conservation officials borrowed a bloodhound to help track down persons responsible for setting fires in the eastern Kentucky mountains.

College students who planned to carry "torches of higher learning" through Ohio Saturday to plug for a $250 million capital improvements bond issue were instructed to light the torches only in cities because of the acute fire danger. Nearly 420 fires were burning in the state but fast detection and lack of high winds kept damage down.

West Virginia's natural resources department reported 45 new forest fires Thursday and said 60 of 133 fires in the state were out of control.

The Northeast Forest Fire Protection Commission said there were 75 new fires in Massachusetts, 6 in New Hampshire, 5 each in Connecticut and Rhode Island and 2 in Vermont.

Maine and Rhode Island prepared to rush 10 experienced forest fire supervisory personnel and 25,000 feet of fire hose to Massachusetts if needed.

Massachusetts Agriculture Commissioner Charles H. McNamara hoped to see surplus grain directed into his state for farmers facing a drought-caused food shortage.

U.S. Agriculture Department officials said farmers of 29 states were being offered emergency credit and cut-rate feed prices.

HEAVY RAIN AND winds are expected today for eastern parts of Carolinas and parts of Virginia as Hurricane Ginny approaches. Rest of nation will remain dry, except for scattered thundershowers in south central Plains and Mississippi valley. Mild temperatures will be the rule for the nation, except for cooler weather in the northwest and well above seasonable levels in the northeast. (AP Wirephoto)

THIS WAS THE CIVIL WAR

By NERTON T. AKERS
United Press International
A Civil War soldier who lugged a heavy musket, from 40 to 60 rounds of ammunition, half a pup tent, a blanket, a canteen and assorted cooking utensils worried less about the weight than about food.

If a soldier "liberated" chickens, turkeys and ham from plantations, he soon began grumbling because he had no bacon and hardtack.

The Union army penned up in Chattanooga, Tenn., in October 1863 after losing the battle of Chickamauga, was not eating well — in fact, teamsters had to guard their mules because the soldiers stole the corn from the animals' nosebags. They had little bacon, less hardtack and no trimmings.

"The men had been on half rations for a considerable time," Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, who had just assumed command of the army, wrote. "The beef was so poor that the soldiers were in the habit of saying that they were living on 'half rations of hard bread and dried beef on the hoof.' It looked, indeed, as if but two courses were open; the one to starve, the other to surrender."

The reason for the famine was the fact that the besieging Confederate army controlled the Tennessee River below Chattanooga and that was the only way Grant could bring in provisions in large enough quantities to feed his army and its animals.

Grant was not a general to sit and wait for an event to happen. He preferred to do something about it.

Using a plan worked out before he arrived — who conceived the plan is a matter of dispute — Grant broke the Confederate blockade of the river and supplies flowed again.

Part of the Union army was at Bridgeport, Ala., about 25 miles southwest of Chattanooga, under the command of Maj. Gen. Joseph Hooker who had brought two corps of reinforcements from the Army of the Potomac in Virginia.

Hooker's men marched toward Chattanooga early on Oct. 27, 1863. He was not in favor of the move.

"It is a very hazardous operation and almost sure to procure us a defeat," he was quoted.

His men marched 15 miles that day. Confederate pickets along the way fell back.

To Hooker it was touch and go as he approached the Tennessee River below Chattanooga where it looped back north.

The Confederates kept up rifle and artillery fire from the top of Lookout Mountain but did little damage. Any moment Hooker expected Confederate columns to attack his extended force from the foothills of Lookout.

At the most exposed point on a crossroads Hooker sat on his horse as his men marched by to Brown's Ferry, five miles west of Chattanooga, and assured them there was no danger of a Confederate attack in force. At least he hoped so.

Another three miles and his men reached Brown's Ferry. There they met a Union force from Chattanooga which had seized a bridgehead on the river the day before and had thrown up a pontoon bridge with little resistance.

"Hurrah, hurrah, you have opened our bread line," they shouted as Hooker's men arrived.

Grant's "cracker line" was open. Now supplies could come up the Tennessee River to Brown's Ferry and easily be hauled across the neck of land the five miles to Chattanooga out of sight and range of the Rebels on Lookout.

The forces from Chattanooga which had seized the Brown's Ferry bridgehead had paddled their pontoons on the Tennessee River from the north in secrecy. The longer route was necessary because the Confederates on Lookout Mountain, which stands like a sentinel across the river from Chattanooga, could see every move of the Federals. To have started a pontoon train west toward Brown's Ferry would have tipped off Confederate pickets that something was up and enabled Bragg to pile in more troops.

Seizure of Brown's Ferry surprised the Confederates but they made a fight to pinch off Hooker's force that night.

Soon after midnight they attacked a Union division commanded by Maj. Gen. John W. Geary at Wauhatchie, Tenn., just south of Chattanooga and west of Lookout.

This was one of the few night attacks of the Civil War and was fought in the moonlight with only an occasional cloud darkening the sky.

Hearing the firing, Hooker ordered troops from Brown's Ferry back to aid Geary. They were slow, owing partly to stopping to clear away Confederate flankers and did not reach Geary's division until about 5 a.m. By that time the battle was over.

The fighting was confused. The Confederates — about 2,100 in the main force and 1,800 in a flanking maneuver — attacked Geary repeatedly but every time they were thrown back. By 4 a.m. the fight was over and the Confederates — commanded by Brig. Gen. Evander M. Law — fell back to their Lookout Mountain stronghold.

The Federals counted 437 casualties, the Confederates 460. Out of the moonlit battle came one of the best myths of the Civil War.

The story goes that during the fighting the mules of Geary's wagon train stampeded toward the Confederate lines. Thinking they were being charged by Federal cavalry, the Rebels cut and ran before the mule brigade.

The story isn't true but Grant repeated it in his memoirs.

The myth was topped off with the alleged remark of some wag that in honor of their charge the mules should have been breveted as horses.

While the maneuvering around Lookout assured the Federals of sufficient food, forage and ammunition, the besieging Confederates fared less well. Bragg's commissary was failing, according to Pvt. J. B. Polley of the 4th Texas.

"Appetite comes with eating, it is said," he wrote in a letter, "but to the Texans in Bragg's army it comes with fasting."

Blue beef and musty corn meal have become monotonous. Anyhow, my comrade, Jim Somerville and I decided to "enrich our diet" and we engaged in a search for a quadruped of porcine persuasion.

"We found ourselves in a secluded glade and in near proximity to a couple of fair-sized and well-fed hogs."

Somerville's musket missed fire but eventually they killed and skinned one of the hogs. As they toted away the carcass they ran afoul of provost guards.

Taken before the provost marshal, Polley and Somerville contended they had paid for the hog. The officer was skeptical but let them take the carcass on the promise they could prove their purchase the next day.

That night their comrades ponied up $100 as they ate the hog and the next day Polley paid off a farmer who claimed to own the hog.

Polley wrote that they were "heartily congratulated on the hunger-satisfying issue of our adventure."

A Federal infantry company during the Civil War consisted of a minimum of 64 privates and a maximum of 82. Each company was authorized to comprise one captain, one first lieutenant, one second lieutenant, one first sergeant, four sergeants, eight corporals, two musicians (buglers), and one wagoner. Early in the war the officers were selected by the men.

How To Keep Well

TONGUE-TIED
True tongue-tie is rare yet many physicians are consulted by parents of toddlers who believe the condition exists and that the band beneath the tongue should be snipped. Mothers of youngsters under 2 fear the child's speech will be faulty unless this is done. The same idea prevails when Johnny is 3 or 4 and is slow to talk or fails to speak distinctly. These ideas have been handed down from the past.

By definition, tongue-tie is a condition in which the tip of the tongue cannot be protruded beyond the lower incisor teeth. When protrusion is attempted, the end of the tongue becomes notched as it is held back by a short band of tissue (frenulum) under the tongue. In true tongue-tie the frenulum is absent at birth or contains scar tissue. This abnormality may interfere with pronunciation of some consonants and with the playing of wind instruments.

But many of the young children mentioned previously do not have the disorder even though they cannot stick out the tongue beyond the lips. Spontaneous cure occurs when the tongue is used more frequently in normal speech. An otherwise healthy, intelligent boy or girl with persistent tongue-tie is most unusual.

On the other hand, when a speech defect persists after age 4, the cause may be traced to weak, incomplete, or uncoordinated tongue movements. These children may have cerebral palsy or congenital brain defects, including mental retardation.

Here the frenulum may be snipped when it appears to be too short because it does not move properly. But surgery does not improve the condition because something is wrong with the speech mechanism. Children with an underdeveloped lower jaw and those who stammer may go thru a similar ordeal. The modern physician is aware of these pitfalls and recommends surgery unless these other possibilities are considered first.

Mrs. K. writes: My 16-year-old daughter has a heart murmur. Her father died of coronary thrombosis. Is there a relationship between these two disorders?

REPLY
No. Coronary thrombosis is commoner after age 50 and is caused by hardening of the coronary arteries. Your daughter's murmur may be due to a congenital defect of the heart or to a scarred valve. It also may be a harmless sound and not a sign of cardiac disease.

THRUSH
M. H. writes: I have what the doctor calls a monilial infection in my tongue, throat, and chest. Is this a form of allergy?

REPLY
No — a fungal infection called thrush. It favors infants and debilitated oldsters. Good oral hygiene is helpful in clearing up this condition.

HYPOTENSION
M. O. writes: Is a blood pressure of 100 in a man considered dangerously low?

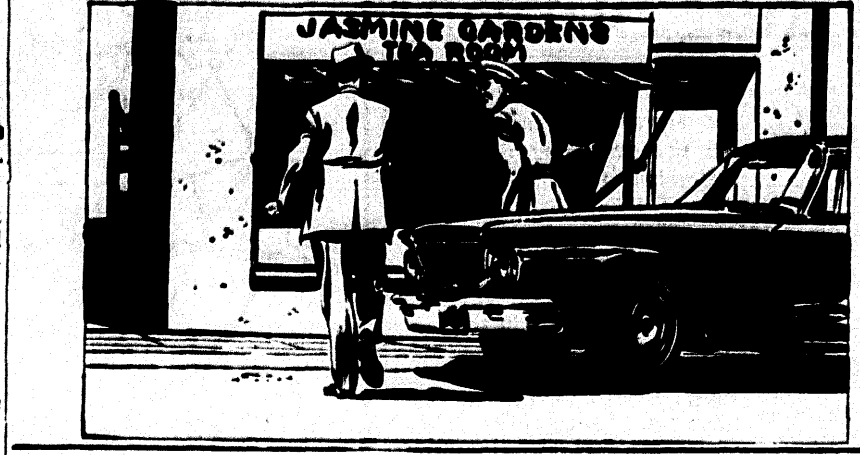

REPLY
No, if you refer to the systolic pressure, and the man otherwise is healthy. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on hypotension.

RUNNING EAR
L. H. writes: Could a bad head cold cause a watery secretion from the ears?

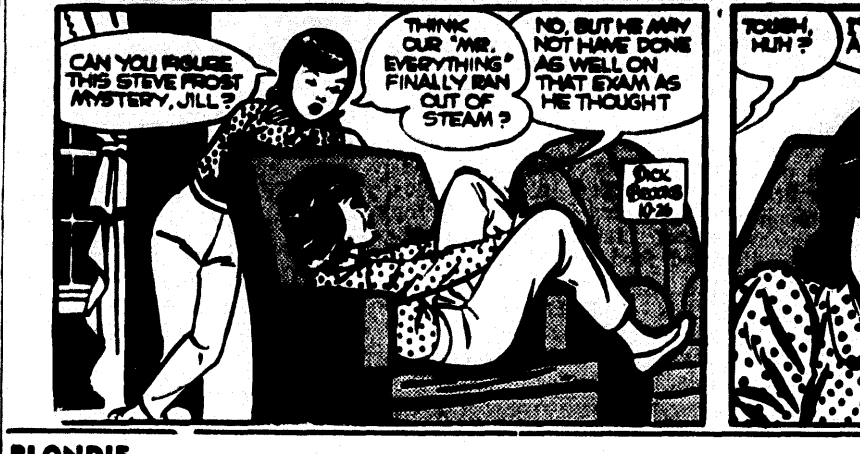

REPLY
Yes, provided there were openings in both eardrums as a result of previous infection or blockage of the eustachian tubes. This would be most unlikely.

Anti-Red Group Lacks Evidence, Judge Decides

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A state anti-subversive committee relied on conclusions instead of legal evidence in raiding a racial integration organization, a state judge said Friday.

Judge J. Bernard Cocke ruled there wasn't enough evidence shown by the state to warrant charges against three men arrested in the raid.

State and city police hit the Southern Conference Education Fund, Inc., Oct. 4 at the request of the Louisiana Joint Legislative Committee on Un-American Activities.

The raiders also hit the office of law partners B. E. Smith and Bruce Walzer and Smith's home. Smith is attorney for Dr. James Dombrowski, director of the fund.

All three men were booked—but never charged—with criminal conspiracy in the operation of a subversive organization. They were freed on parole shortly after their arrest.

State Rep. James Pfister of New Orleans, committee chairman, said he would present "evidence" against the men Tuesday before the U. S. Senate internal security subcommittee in Washington.

Pfister said records and other items seized in the raids had been taken over by the subcommittee on a subpoena signed by Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss.

During the pre-trial hearing in Judge Cocke's criminal district court, Jack N. Rogers of Baton Rouge committee counsel, said he thought there was sufficient evidence for trial.

Anti-Red Group Lacks Evidence, Judge Decides

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A state anti-subversive committee relied on conclusions instead of legal evidence in raiding a racial integration organization, a state judge said Friday.

Judge J. Bernard Cocke ruled there wasn't enough evidence shown by the state to warrant charges against three men arrested in the raid.

State and city police hit the Southern Conference Education Fund, Inc., Oct. 4 at the request of the Louisiana Joint Legislative Committee on Un-American Activities.

The raiders also hit the office of law partners B. E. Smith and Bruce Walters and Smith's home. Smith is attorney for Dr. James Dombrowski, director of the fund.

All three men were booked — but never charged — with criminal conspiracy in the operation of a subversive organization. They were freed on parole shortly after their arrest.

State Rep. James Pfister of New Orleans, committee chairman, said he would present "evidence" against the men Tuesday before the U. S. Senate internal security subcommittee in Washington.

Pfister said records and other items seized in the raids had been taken over by the subcommittee on a subpoena signed by Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss.

During the pre-trial hearing in Judge Cocke's criminal district court, Jack N. Rogers of Baton Rouge committee counsel, said he thought there was sufficient evidence for trial.

Mickey Rooney, Buddy Hackett and other stars who accepted jobs in Communist Yugoslavia are going to find themselves coming in for a bit of criticism from U.S. citizens who don't think it's too cool for American performers to lend themselves to promoting Iron Curtain countries as entertainment bases. Especially since Mickey and Buddy—and others who went over there for filmings—aren't that hard up. They can get plenty of jobs in the United States, or in friendly nations.

Mme. Nhu, taping an interview for the TV show "Ladies of the Press," dropped a key comment. When asked how she should justify her position to people in this country, the First Lady of Viet Nam made it clear she did not have to justify herself to anyone. "I am the leader of the Vietnamese women," she said. "If anyone wants to win Viet Nam, they must win ME." The irony of Mme. Nhu's vast publicity in this country is the relationship between her beauty and her press coverage. If she were not beautiful as well as controversial, her arrival and subsequent school lectures in fractured English would have rated only a few paragraphs in the local newspapers as well as those around the country. THIS WAS THE CIVIL WAR

By NESTON T. AKERS

United Press International
A Civil War soldier who lugged a heavy musket, from 40 to 60 rounds of ammunition, half a pup tent, a blanket, a canteen and assorted cooking utensils worried less about the weight than about food.

If a soldier "liberated" chickens, turkeys and ham from plantations, he soon began grumbling because he had no bacon and hardtack.

The Union army penned up in Chattanooga, Tenn., in October 1863 after losing the battle of Chickamauga, was not eating well — in fact, teamsters had to guard their mules because the soldiers stole the corn from the animals' noses. They had little bacon, less hardtack and no trimmings.

"The men had been on half rations for a considerable time," Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, who had just assumed command of the army, wrote.

"The beef was so poor that the soldiers were in the habit of saying that they were living on 'half rations of hard bread and dried beef on the hoof.' It looked, indeed, as if two courses were open; the one to starve, the other to surrender."

The reason for the famine was the fact that the besieging Confederate army controlled the Tennessee River below Chattanooga and that was the only way Grant could bring in provisions in large enough quantities to feed his army and its animals.

Grant was not a general to sit and wait for an event to happen. He preferred to do something about it.

Using a plan worked out before he arrived — who conceived the plan is a matter of dispute — Grant broke the Confederate blockade of the river and supplies flowed again.

Part of the Union army was at Bridgeport, Ala., about 25 miles southwest of Chattanooga, under the command of Maj. Gen. Joseph Hooker who had brought two corps of reinforcements from the Army of the Potomac in Virginia.

Hooker's men marched toward Chattanooga early on Oct. 27, 1863. He was not in favor of the move.

"It is a very hazardous operation and almost sure to procure us a defeat," he was quoted.

His men marched 15 miles that day. Confederate pickets along the way fell back.

The next day Hooker marched along the valley with Lookout Mountain, swarming with Confederates, on his right. He could see their signal stations wiggling messages to the headquarters of Gen. Braxton Bragg, Confederate commander. To Hooker it was touch and go as he approached the Tennessee River below Chattanooga where it looped back north. The Confederates kept up rifle and artillery fire from the top of Lookout Mountain but did little damage. Any moment Hooker expected Confederate columns to attack his extended force from the foothills of Lookout.

At the most exposed point on a crossroads Hooker sat on his horse as his men marched by to Brown's Ferry, five miles west of Chattanooga, and assured them there was no danger of a Confederate attack in force. At least he hoped so.

Another three miles and his men reached Brown's Ferry. There they met a Union force from Chattanooga which had seized a bridgehead on the river the day before and had thrown up a pontoon bridge with little resistance.

"Hurrah, hurrah, you have opened our bread line," they shouted as Hooker's men arrived.

Grant's "cracker line" was open. Now supplies could come up the Tennessee River to Brown's Ferry and easily be hauled across the neck of land the five miles to Chattanooga out of sight and range of the Rebels on Lookout.

The forces from Chattanooga which had seized the Brown's Ferry bridgehead had paddled their pontoons on the Tennessee River from the north in secrecy. The longer route was necessary because the Confederates on Lookout Mountain, which stands like a sentinel across the river from Chattanooga, could see every move of the Federals. To have started a pontoon train west toward Brown's Ferry would have tipped off Confederate pickets that something was up and enabled Bragg to pile in more troops.

Seizure of Brown's Ferry surprised the Confederates but they made a fight to pinch off Hooker's force that night. Soon after midnight they attacked a Union division commanded by Maj. Gen. John W. Geary at Wauhatchie, Tenn., just south of Chattanooga and west of Lookout.

This was one of the few night attacks of the Civil War and was fought in the moonlight with only an occasional cloud darkening the sky.

Hearing the firing, Hooker ordered troops from Brown's Ferry back to aid Geary. They were slow, owing partly to stopping to clear away Confederate flankers and did not reach Geary's division until about 5 a.m. By that time the battle was over.

The fighting was confused. The Confederates — about 2,100 in the main force and 1,900 in a flanking maneuver — attacked Geary repeatedly but every time they were thrown back. By 4 a.m. the fight was over and the Confederates — commanded by Brig. Gen. Evander M. Law — fell back to their Lookout Mountain stronghold.

The Federals counted 437 casualties, the Confederates 460.

Out of the moonlit battle came one of the best myths of the Civil War.

The story goes that during the fighting the mules of Geary's wagon train stampeded toward the Confederate lines. Thinking they were being charged by Federal cavalry, the Rebels cut and ran before the mule brigade.

The story isn't true but Grant repeated it in his memoirs. The myth was topped off with the alleged remark of some wag that in honor of their charge the mules should have been breveted as horses.

While the maneuvering around Lookout assured the Federals of sufficient food, the besieging Confederates fared less well. Bragg's commissary was failing, according to Pvt. J. B. Polley of the 4th Texas.

"Appetite comes with eating, it is said," he wrote in a letter, "but to the Texans in Bragg's army it comes with fasting."

Blue Beef and musty corn meal have become monotonous. Anyhow, my comrade, Jim Somerville and I decided to 'varigate our eatin' and we engaged in a search for a quadruped of porcine persuasion."

"We found ourselves in a secluded glade and in near proximity to a couple of fair-sized and well-fed hogs."

Somerville's musket missed fire but eventually they killed and skinned one of the hogs. As they toted away the carcass they ran afoul of provost guards.

Taken before the provost marshal, Polley and Somerville confessed they had paid for the hog. The officer was skeptical but let them take the carcass on the promise they could prove their purchase the next day.

That night their comrades ponied up $100 as they ate the hog and the next day Polley paid off a farmer who claimed to own the hog.

Polley wrote that they were "heartily congratulated on the hunger-satisfying issue of our adventure."

How To Keep Well

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

True tongue-tie is rare yet many physicians are consulted by parents of toddlers who believe the condition exists and that the band beneath the tongue should be snipped. Mothers of youngsters under 2 fear the child's speech will be faulty unless this is done. The same idea prevails when Johnny is 3 or 4 and is slow to talk or fails to speak distinctly. These ideas have been handed down from the past.

By definition, tongue-tie is a condition in which the tip of the tongue cannot be protruded beyond the lower incisor teeth. When protrusion is attempted, the end of the tongue becomes notched as it is held back by a short band of tissue (frenulum) under the tongue. In true tongue-tie the frenulum is absent at birth or contains scar tissue. This abnormality may interfere with pronunciation of some consonants and with the playing of wind instruments. But many of the young children mentioned previously do not have the disorder even though they cannot stick out the tongue beyond the lips. Spontaneous cure occurs when the tongue is used more frequently in normal speech. An otherwise healthy, intelligent boy or girl with persistent tongue-tie is most unusual.

On the other hand, when a speech defect persists after age 4, the cause may be traced to weak, incomplete, or uncoordinated tongue movements. These children may have cerebral palsy or congenital brain defects, including mental retardation.

The frenulum may be snipped when it appears to be too short because it does not move properly. But surgery does not improve the condition because something is wrong with the speech mechanism. Children with an underdeveloped lower jaw and those who stammer may go thru a similar ordeal. The modern physician is aware of these pitfalls and recommends surgery unless these other possibilities are considered first.

ENTIRELY DIFFERENT
Mrs. K. writes: My 16-year-old daughter has a heart murmur. Her father died of coronary thrombosis. Is there a relationship between these two disorders?

REPLY
No. Coronary thrombosis is commoner after age 50 and is caused by hardening of the coronary arteries. Your daughter's murmur may be due to a congenital defect of the heart or to a scarred valve. It also may be a harmless sound and not a sign of cardiac disease.

THRUSH
M. H. writes: I have what the doctor calls a monilial infection in my tongue, throat, and chest. Is this a form of allergy?

REPLY
No — a fungal infection called thrush. It favors infants and debilitated oldsters. Good oral hygiene is helpful in clearing up this condition.

HYPOTENSION
M. O. writes: Is a blood pressure of 100 in a man considered dangerously low?

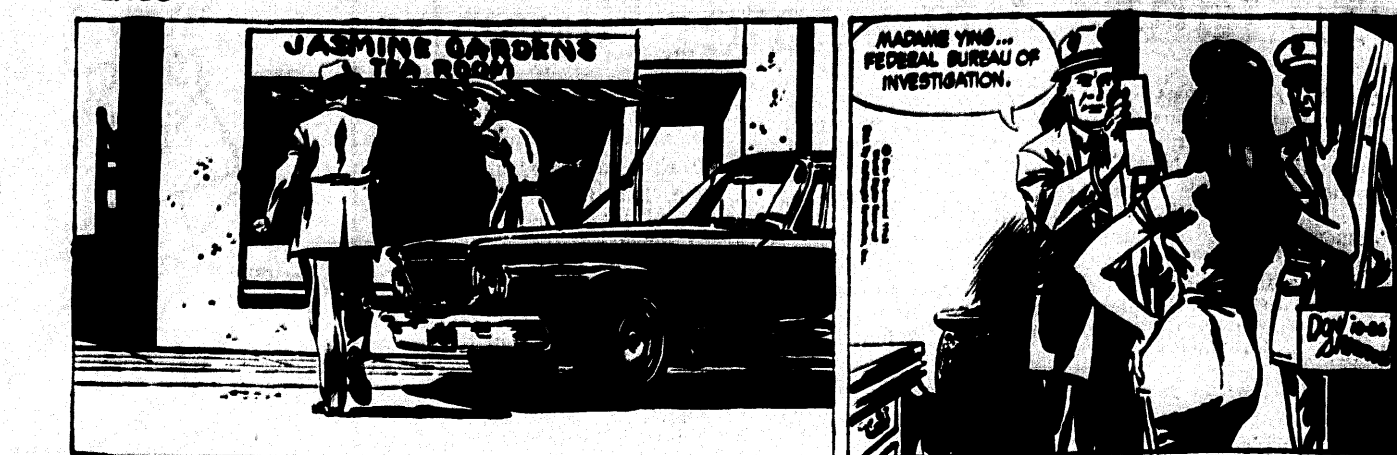

REPLY
No, if you refer to the systolic pressure, and the man otherwise is healthy. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on hypotension.

RUNNING EAR
L. H. writes: Could a bad head cold cause a watery secretion from the ears?

REPLY
Yes, provided there were openings in both eardrums as a result of previous infection or blockage of the eustachian tubes. This would be most unlikely.

Anti-Red Group Lacks Evidence, Judge Decides

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A state anti-subversive committee relied on conclusions instead of legal evidence in raiding a racial integration organization, a state judge said Friday.

Judge J. Bernard Cocke ruled there wasn't enough evidence shown by the state to warrant charges against three men arrested in the raid.

State and city police hit the Southern Conference Education Fund, Inc., Oct. 4 at the request of the Louisiana Joint Legislative Committee on Un-American Activities.

The raiders also hit the office of law partners B. E. Smith and Bruce Walters and Smith's home. Smith is attorney for Dr. James Dombrowski, director of the fund.

All three men were booked—but never charged—with criminal conspiracy in the operation of a subversive organization. They were freed on parole shortly after their arrest.

State Rep. James Pfister of New Orleans, committee chairman, said he would present "evidence" against the men Tuesday before the U. S. Senate internal security subcommittee in Washington.

Pfister said records and other items seized in the raids had been taken over by the subcommittee on a subpoena signed by Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss.

During the pre-trial hearing in Judge Cocke's criminal district court, Jack N. Rogers of Baton Rouge committee counsel, said he thought there was sufficient evidence for trial.

"It is a very hazardous operation and almost sure to procure us a defeat," he was quoted.

His men marched 15 miles that day. Confederate pickets along the way fell back.

The next day Hooker marched along the valley with Lookout Mountain, swarming with Confederates, on his right. He could see their signal stations wiggling messages to the headquarters of Gen. Braxton Bragg, Confederate commander.

To Hooker it was touch and go as he approached the Tennessee River below Chattanooga where it looped back north.

The Confederates kept up rifle and artillery fire from the top of Lookout Mountain but did little damage. Any moment Hooker expected Confederate columns to attack his extended force from the foothills of Lookout.

At the most exposed point on a crossroads Hooker sat on his horse as his men marched by to Brown's Ferry, five miles west of Chattanooga, and assured them there was no danger of a Confederate attack in force. At least he hoped so.

Another three miles and his men reached Brown's Ferry. There they met a Union force from Chattanooga which had seized a bridgehead on the river the day before and had thrown up a pontoon bridge with little resistance.

"Hurrah, hurrah, you have opened our bread line," they shouted as Hooker's men arrived.

Grant's "cracker line" was open. Now supplies could come up the Tennessee River to Brown's Ferry and easily be hauled across the neck of land the five miles to Chattanooga out of sight and range of the Rebels on Lookout.

The forces from Chattanooga which had seized the Brown's Ferry bridgehead had paddled their pontoons on the Tennessee River from the north in secrecy. The longer route was necessary because the Confederates on Lookout Mountain, which stands like a sentinel across the river from Chattanooga, could see every move of the Federals. To have started a pontoon train west toward Brown's Ferry would have tipped off Confederate pickets that something was up and enabled Bragg to pile in more troops.

Seizure of Brown's Ferry surprised the Confederates but they made a fight to pinch off Hooker's force that night. Soon after midnight they attacked a Union division commanded by Maj. Gen. John W. Geary at Wauhatchie, Tenn., just south of Chattanooga and west of Lookout.

This was one of the few night attacks of the Civil War and was fought in the moonlight with only an occasional cloud darkening the sky.

Hearing the firing, Hooker ordered troops from Brown's Ferry back to aid Geary. They were slow, owing partly to stopping to clear away Confederate flankers and did not reach Geary's division until about 5 a.m. By that time the battle was over.

The fighting was confused. The Confederates — about 2,100 in the main force and 1,800 in a flanking maneuver — attacked Geary repeatedly but every time they were thrown back. By 4 a.m. the fight was over and the Confederates — commanded by Brig. Gen. Evander M. Law — fell back to their Lookout Mountain stronghold.

The Federals counted 437 casualties, the Confederates 460.

Out of the moonlit battle came one of the best myths of the Civil War.

The story goes that during the fighting the mules of Geary's wagon train stampeded toward the Confederate lines. Thinking they were being charged by Federal cavalry, the Rebels cut and ran before the mule brigade.

The story isn't true but Grant repeated it in his memoirs. The myth was topped off with the alleged remark of some wag that in honor of their charge the mules should have been breveted as horses.

While the maneuvering around Lookout assured the Federals of sufficient food, forage and ammunition, the besieging Confederates fared less well. Bragg's commissary was failing, according to Pvt. J. B. Polley of the 4th Texas.

"Appetite comes with eating, it is said," he wrote in a letter, "but to the Texans in Bragg's army it comes with fasting."

"Blue Beef and musty corn meal have become monotonous. Anyhow, my comrade, Jim Somerville and I decided to 'varigate our eatin' and we engaged in a search for a quadruped of porcine persuasion."

"We found ourselves in a secluded glade and in near proximity to a couple of fair-sized and well-fed hogs."

Somerville's musket missed fire but eventually they killed and skinned one of the hogs.

As they toted away the carcass they ran afoul of provost guards. Taken before the provost marshal, Polley and Somerville contended they had paid for the hog. The officer was skeptical but let them take the carcass on the promise they could prove their purchase the next day.

That night their comrades ponied up $100 as they ate the hog and the next day Polley paid off a farmer who claimed to own the hog.

Polley wrote that they were "heartily congratulated on the hunger-satisfying issue of our adventure."

A Federal infantry company during the Civil War consisted of a minimum of 64 privates and a maximum of 82. Each company was authorized to comprise one captain, one first lieutenant, one second lieutenant, one first sergeant, four sergeants, eight corporals, two musicians (buglers), and one wagoner. Early in the war the officers were selected by the men.

How To Keep Well

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

TONGUE-TIED

True tongue-tie is rare yet many physicians are consulted by parents of toddlers who believe the condition exists and that the band beneath the tongue should be snipped. Mothers of youngsters under 2 fear the child's speech will be faulty unless this is done. The same idea prevails when Johnny is 3 or 4 and is slow to talk or fails to speak distinctly. These ideas have been handed down from the past.

By definition, tongue-tie is a condition in which the tip of the tongue cannot be protruded beyond the lower incisor teeth. When protrusion is attempted, the end of the tongue becomes notched as it is held back by a short band of tissue (frenulum) under the tongue. In true tongue-tie the frenulum is absent at birth or contains scar tissue. This abnormality may interfere with pronunciation of some consonants and with the playing of wind instruments.

But many of the young children mentioned previously do not have the disorder even though they cannot stick out the tongue beyond the lips. Spontaneous cure occurs when the tongue is used more frequently in normal speech. An otherwise healthy, intelligent boy or girl with persistent tongue-tie is most unusual.

On the other hand, when a speech defect persists after age 4, the cause may be traced to weak, incomplete, or uncoordinated tongue movements. These children may have cerebral palsy or congenital brain defects, including mental retardation.

Here the frenulum may be snipped when it appears to be too short because it does not move properly. But surgery does not improve the condition because something is wrong with the speech mechanism. Children with an underdeveloped lower jaw and those who stammer may go thru a similar ordeal. The modern physician is aware of these pitfalls and recommends surgery unless these, other possibilities are considered first.

ENTIRELY DIFFERENT
Mrs. K. writes: My 16-year-old daughter has a heart murmur. Her father died of coronary thrombosis. Is there a relationship between these two disorders?

REPLY
No. Coronary thrombosis is commoner after age 50 and is caused by hardening of the coronary arteries. Your daughter's murmur may be due to a congenital defect of the heart or to a scarred valve. It also may be a harmless sound and not a sign of cardiac disease.

THRUSH
M. H. writes: I have what the doctor calls a monilia infection in my tongue, throat, and chest. Is this a form of allergy?

REPLY
No — a fungal infection called thrush. It favors infants and debilitated oldsters. Good oral hygiene is helpful in clearing up this condition.

HYPOTENSION
M. O. writes: Is a blood pressure of 100 in a man considered dangerously low?

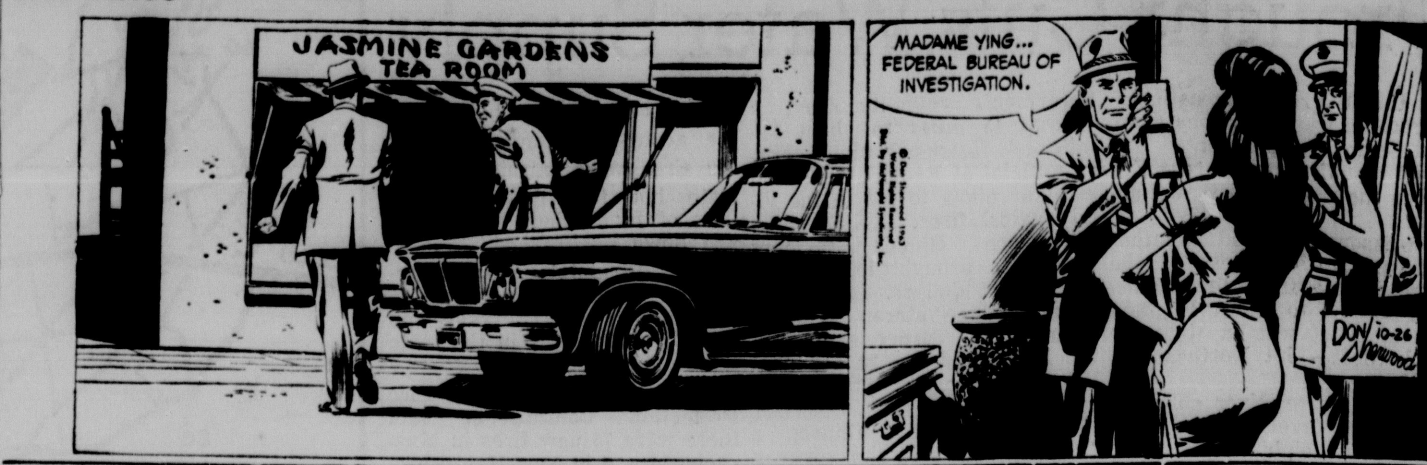

REPLY
No, if you refer to the systolic pressure, and the man otherwise is healthy. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on hypotension.

RUNNING EAR
L. H. writes: Could a bad head cold cause a watery secretion from the ears?

REPLY
Yes, provided there were openings in both eardrums as a result of previous infection or blockage of the eustachian tubes. This would be most unlikely.

Anti-Red Group Lacks Evidence, Judge Decides

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A state anti-subversive committee relied on conclusions instead of legal evidence in raiding a racial integration organization, a state judge said Friday.

Judge J. Bernard Cocke ruled there wasn't enough evidence shown by the state to warrant charges against three men arrested in the raid.

State and city police hit the Southern Conference Education Fund, Inc., Oct. 4 at the request of the Louisiana Joint Legislative Committee on Un-American Activities.

The raiders also hit the office of law partners B. E. Smith and Bruce Walters and Smith's home. Smith is attorney for Dr. James Dombrowski, director of the fund.

All three men were booked — but never charged — with criminal conspiracy in the operation of a subversive organization. They were freed on parole shortly after their arrest.

State Rep. James Pfister of New Orleans, committee chairman, said he would present "evidence" against the men Tuesday before the U. S. Senate internal security subcommittee in Washington.

Pfister said records and other items seized in the raids had been taken over by the subcommittee on a subpoena signed by Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss.

During the pre-trial hearing in Judge Cocke's criminal district court, Jack N. Rogers of Baton Rouge committee counsel, said he thought there was sufficient evidence for trial.

Mickey Rooney, Buddy Hackett and other stars who accepted jobs in Communist Yugoslavia are going to find themselves coming in for a bit of criticism from U.S. citizens who don't think it's too cool for American performers to lend themselves to promoting Iron Curtain countries as entertainment bases. Especially since Mickey and Buddy — and others who went over there for filmings — aren't that hard up. They can get plenty of jobs in the United States, or in friendly nations.

Mme. Nhu, tapping an interview for the TV show "Ladies of the Press," dropped a key comment. Nhu's vast publicity in this country is the relationship between her beauty and her press coverage. If she were not beautiful as well as controversial, her arrival and subsequent school lectures in fractured English would have rated only a few paragraphs in the local newspapers as well as those around the country. If she'd been an old hag, or even just plain, plain, she'd never have been shown night after night on the 6, 7, 11 p.m. and midnight television news roundups. Madame Pandit, Mme. Nhu's sister, has made some outrageous statements, but she never enjoyed the sustained publicity accorded to Mme. Nhu, simple because she wasn't a cutie-pie.

WOOD TECHNOLOGY

Special Grant Is Given Tech

RUSTON (Special) — To underwrite research studies of a pure and applied nature in wood technology, a special grant has been made by T. L. James & Co. of Ruston, Louisiana Tech.

Announcement of the award was made jointly by Dr. F. Jay Taylor, Tech president, and H. D. Burkhalter, vice president and director of the forestry division of the James company.

Because of the nature of the research to be performed, Dr. Taylor said it is not possible at this time to determine the exact amount of the grant but he added that it will "exceed several thousand dollars." The project will continue at least a year and may be extended by mutual agreement, Dr. Taylor pointed out.

"We are indeed fortunate to have the excellent facilities of Louisiana Tech and its competent faculty made available to us for this research work," Burkhalter said.

The research activities will be conducted both on the Tech campus and on the woodlands of the James Company in the vicinity of Ruston.

"We have selected Prof. Ernest J. Russell of the department of forestry at Louisiana Tech to direct this project and he will be assisted by personnel of the James Company," Dr. Taylor said.

Professor Russell received his master's degree in forestry from Louisiana State University in 1937 and has been a member of the Tech faculty since 1947.

Such funds as may be required for labor, research equipment, secretarial work and other purposes, in addition to the research grant, will be provided by the James Company.

In pointing up the significance of research to Southern tree farming operations, Dr. Taylor noted, "not only will this project up-grade the professional status of Tech's forestry department, but this is a marked increase in the total research program of Louisiana Tech, which is one of our major responsibilities to Louisiana."

Road Contracts For Catahoula To Be Awarded

JONESVILLE (Special) — Contracts for construction on two road projects in Catahoula Parish are expected to be let within the next four weeks and the state is expected to let on Nov. 20 Gilbert stated.

Hard-surfacing of 4.671 miles of Hwy. 128 will complete the final link in the new Alexandria-Natchez highway which had been held up by bright-of-way complications, he said. The highway has been under construction for several years.

Gilbert explained that the bridge at Larto Lake will be 305 feet long, 20 feet, 9 inches wide and will have three-foot handrails on both sides. The estimated cost of the structure has been set at $65,000 by the Louisiana Highway Department.

The senator said that a contract for hard-surfacing a portion of La. Hwy 128 will probably be awarded Oct. 30. Bids for the work are scheduled to be opened on that date. A contract on the other project, construction of a bridge at the Larto Lake dam and spillway has 1,308 students living in the campus. He said the caliber of the faculty had improved and that the quality of the student body was better.

Parish Officers Arrest Four On Morals Charges

Four Negro youths were arrested Friday on morals charges by the Ouachita Parish sheriff's department.

Sheriff Bailey Grant identified them as Leslie Williams, 19, 2007½ Short Thomas St.; Odell Harris, 19, 2002 Short Thomas St.; Joseph Everett, 18, 203 Morton St.; and George Earl Butler, 2019 Thomas St. All four have been placed in the parish jail on counts of aggravated rape, arising from an incident involving an 11-year-old Negro juvenile.

The sheriff's department also transported two prisoners to the state penitentiary at Angola Friday to begin their terms. They were David Allen McCandless, sentenced to five years for burglary, and James Pickett sentenced to one year for auto theft.

Monroe police, meanwhile, were probing a theft and a burglary that was reported Friday. Three children in the home of M. J. Varino, 314 Thomas Ave., told police they saw a burglar enter the house but were afraid to say anything while he was inside. They described him as a small white man. He reportedly entered the building through a rear window, proceeded through the house, taking money from Varino and Mrs. Varino's wallet, then left through the front of the house. About $8 was reported missing.

The theft of a tire and wheel and a fan belt from a Volkswagen was also being checked by Monroe officers. The items were reported stolen from a car belonging to H. C. Haddox, 210 Rochelle St., while the vehicle was parked at the Sears Parking lot.

Three persons were booked on counts of driving while under the influence of intoxicating beverages by local law agencies Friday. Early Friday, at 12:30 a.m., West Monroe police arrested Alex M. Patterson, 38, Rt. 5, Box 84, West Monroe, on Cypress Street for DWI. Monroe officers booked Negro Clemmie Love, 2801 Looney St., for DWI, reckless driving and speeding at 3:40 a.m. after apprehending him at the intersection of Powell Avenue and Gaston Street. The Ouachita parish sheriff's department also booked a Vernon E. Russell, 48, 312 Catalpa St., was apprehended on the count on La. Highway T in Sterlington.

West Monroe's Chamber Gets New Brochures

The West Monroe Chamber of Commerce has an adequate supply of industrial brochures "to handle almost any number of inquiries relative to bringing new business to the city."

This was the judgment Friday of Industrial Committee Chairman Eugene Scott, head of the group whose main aim is the attraction to West Monroe of new industry.

Just printed in volume, the 18-page multilithed brochure is designed to answer the leading questions of industrial prospects. Topic headings cover the city's location, type of government, climate, hospitals and physicians, churches, financial institutions, industries, paper industry, taxes, population, Chamber of Commerce, civic clubs, utilities, news media, schools, retail sales, income and recreational facilities.

Another section is devoted to a description of the Ouachita Valley Vocational-Technical — Technical School.

Parish Police Jury To Meet

A special meeting of the Ouachita Parish Police Jury has been called by President L. B. Pettit for 1:30 p.m. Monday to name a temporary road superintendent.

Pettit said some members of the jury want to employ a "qualified engineer" to succeed the late Wayne Huckabee, parish engineer, who died this week. Pettit said he favored naming Huckaby's assistant Hardy Wells to the post, but noted other applicants would be reviewed.

Meantime, Huckaby was credited by jury members with lacing the parish on a sound fiscal basis by using proper engineering techniques.

Pipeline Corp. Files With FPC For Expansion

HOUSTON (AP) — Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Corp. filed an application with the Federal Power Commission Friday for authority to build $24 million worth of new facilities in 1964.

Transco officials said the new facilities will raise daily pipeline allocations to 34 distributor customers by 43,845,000 cubic feet and peak day storage allocations by 9,818,000 cubic feet. They said the corporation's daily pipeline allocations will then total 1,688,322,000 cubic feet and total gas available from storage on peak days will then total 845,541,000 cubic feet.

Transco operators natural gas line from south Texas to Brooklyn, N. Y., along the route Transco proposes to add 58 miles of 36-inch diameter pipe, and principally on the southeast Louisiana lateral system, a like number miles of 30-inch.

The 36-inch pipe sections will parallel existing two and three line system in Mississippi, Alabama, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Additional compression horsepower will be added at stations near Laurel, Miss., Chatham, Va., and Delta, Pa., officials said.

Bella, Hassan II May Talk Peace

ALGIERS (AP) — The Algerian government said Friday night President Ahmed Ben Bella will meet in Tunis Monday with Morocco's King Hassan II to try to settle their border war under the auspices of King Idriss of Libya and four African presidents.

There was no immediate confirmation from King Hassan.

Ethiopia's Emperor Haile Selassie has visited Morocco, Algiers and now Tunisia in an effort to stop the fighting by getting the two sides to get together.

The emperor reportedly has suggested Tripoli, Libya, as the site of the conference and mentioned all of those named in the Algerian announcement except President Sekou Toure of Guinea as participants.

Murphy said a standing committee would be named to handle the work of the pageant on a year-around basis.

The Monroe Chamber of Commerce, in a special meeting Friday afternoon with a Jaycee committee, promised full support to the effort.

President Mose Loftin praised the Jaycees for accepting the project and pledged, "The senior Chamber will be behind your efforts 100 per cent."

Commented Murphy, "We feel that with the support of the senior Chamber and other growth-minded organizations we can make this pageant a tremendous success."

The franchise agreement will be signed and forwarded to Atlantic City today.

"We are delighted that Monroe was selected from among the other cities being considered and the membership has given the maximum support to make the event greater than ever," concluded Murphy, after the 7 p.m. session in the Gold Room of the Frances Hotel.

"We're certainly aware of what this can mean for the city, both tourist-wise and financially."

Date of the 1964 pageant is not determined, but officials have advised the contest must be concluded by Aug. 15 to qualify a candidate for the Atlantic City finals.

The Northeast band, precision and drill team, the Fusiliers and the entire ROTC corps of cadets will march in the parade, to be followed by organizational floats and cars. Northeast cheerleaders and freshmen dressed in Indian regalia will form the vanguard.

Afternoon activities will begin at 2:30 with open house at campus buildings, including the new Sander Library. Featured at the library will be what is probably the first assemblage of writings of Northeast scholars, which will be displayed in the Rare Books section on the second floor. Open house is scheduled at 4 p.m.

Alumni registration and coffee are planned from 3 to 4 in the main lounge of the College Union Building. The four classes being specially honored at homecoming — 1933, 1943, 1953, and 1963 — will hold fellowship sessions from 3:30 to 4 in the College Union.

The alumni business meeting is set for 4 p.m., with election of officers the main item on the agenda. Northeast will be host to old grads and their spouses at the alumni dinner in Gunby Dining Hall beginning at 5:45 p.m. with President Walker as the principal speaker.

Activities at the homecoming game between Northeast and Southeasters College will start at 7:45 at Brown Stadium, with the game to begin at 8.

Shirley Nelson, a Bastrop sophomore, will be crowned homecoming queen during halftime activities, and alumni association officers will be announced. In Queen Shirley's court will be maid of honor Patricia Twiner of Sunshine, and maids Sue Parkerson of Bossier City, Jan Hallmark of Monroe, Cherie Martin of Pineville, Sherry Phillips of Haynesville, and Jan Reagan of Monroe.

The annual homecoming dance will climax activities for the day. The affair will be held in Gunby Dining Hall, with alumni, guests from Southeastern and college students invited to attend.

WOOD TECHNOLOGY

Special Grant Is Given Tech

RUSTON (Special) — To underwrite research studies of a pure and applied nature in wood technology, a special grant has been made by T. L. James & Co. of Ruston to Louisiana Tech.

Announcement of the award was made jointly by Dr. F. Jay Taylor, Tech president, and H. D. Burkhalter, vice president and director of the forestry division of the James company.

Because of the nature of the research to be performed, Dr. Taylor said it is not possible at this time to determine the exact amount of the grant but he added that it will "exceed several thousand dollars." The project will continue at least a year and may be extended by mutual agreement, Dr. Taylor pointed out.

"We are indeed fortunate to have the excellent facilities of Louisiana Tech and its competent faculty made available to us for this research work," Burkhalter said.

The research activities will be conducted both on the Tech campus and on the woodlands of the James Company in the vicinity of Ruston.

"We have selected Prof. Ernest J. Russell of the department of forestry at Louisiana Tech to direct this project and he will be assisted by personnel of the James Company," Dr. Taylor said.

Professor Russell received his master's degree in forestry from Louisiana State University in 1937 and has been a member of the Tech faculty since 1947.

Such funds as may be required for labor, research equipment, secretarial work and other purposes, in addition to the research grant, will be provided by the James Company.

In pointing up the significance of research to Southern tree farming operations, Dr. Taylor noted, "not only will this project up-grade the professional status of Tech's forestry department, but this is a marked increase in the total research program of Louisiana Tech, which is one of our major responsibilities to Louisiana."

Dr. Walker noted, however, that Northeast faced a problem of advancing its salaries for the faculty, pointing out that an adjustment in this respect was made in September.

But he said the college lost faculty members after last year because of the salary problem, although he pointed out that the average salary at Northeast for faculty members had increased from $5377 in 1957 to $7714 in 1963.

"Our salaries can be more nearly in line within our region if the new salary schedule is implemented," Dr. Walker said, referring to a new schedule proposed by the State Board of Education.

He pointed out that while enrollments are increasing on all college campuses, appropriations are not keeping up, explaining that costs are increasing.

Dr. Walker emphasized the development of physical facilities at Northeast, which now has 1,308 students living on campus. He said the caliber of the faculty had been improved and that the quality of the student body was better.

Hard-surfacing of 4,671 miles of Hwy. 128 will complete the final link in the new Alexandria-Natchez highway which had been held up by bright-of-way complications, he said. The highway has been under construction for several years.

Gilbert explained that the bridge at Larto Lake will be 305 feet long, 20 feet, 9 inches wide and will have three-foot handrails on both sides. The estimated cost of the structure has been set at $65,000 by the Louisiana Highway Department.

West Monroe's Chamber Gets New Brochures

The West Monroe Chamber of Commerce has an adequate supply of industrial brochures "to handle almost any number of inquiries relative to bringing new business to the city."

This was the judgment Friday of Industrial Committee Chairman Eugene Scott, head of the group whose main aim is the attraction to West Monroe of new industry.

Just printed in volume, the 18-page multithread brochure is designed to answer the leading questions of industrial prospects.

Topic headings cover the city's location, type of government, climate, hospitals and physicians, churches, financial institutions, industries, paper industry, taxes, population, Chamber of Commerce, civic clubs, utilities, news media, schools, retail sales, income and recreational facilities.

Another section is devoted to a description of the Ouachita Valley Vocational-Technical — Technical School.

Parish Police Jury To Meet

A special meeting of the Ouachita Parish Police Jury has been called by President L. B. Pettit for 1:30 p.m. Monday to name a temporary road superintendent.

Pettit said some members of the jury want to employ a "qualified engineer" to succeed the late Wayne Huckaby, parish engineer, who died this week.

Pettit said he favored naming Huckaby's assistant Hardy Wells to the post, but noted other applicants would be reviewed.

Meantime, Huckaby was credited by jury members with lacing the parish on a sound fiscal basis by using proper engineering techniques.

Indians Go Stalking Tonight: A Lion Head For Old Grads

STARTING FOR Northeast State tonight will be end Steve Regan (left) and tackle Ronnie Sumpter. Regan (195), a highly sought junior college

Every Tribeman Tensed For Fight

Northeast State's Indians go hunting tonight in search of a trophy for old grads in town for Homecoming. A stuffed Lion head, Southeastern variety, is considered to be the most appropriate trophy possible.

Southeastern's Lions and the Indians meet at 8 p.m. in Brown Stadium. At stake for club lost to Howard and previously-winless Arlington and place in the Gulf States Conference. For the Indians, out of the conference race with two league losses, the game meant only prestige, but plenty of that.

For the first time this year, Northeast Coach Jack Rowan will be able to call on every man on the squad. In the Tribe's previous five games, at least one letterman — usually more — has not been able to play.

Several Indians — ends Sherrel Smith, tackle-guard Joe Alewine, guard Jo McClain, tackle Alden Fontenot, center Tommy Beaubie and halfbacks Ronnie Myrick and Stan Wilson — have asserted bruises but will play. Halfback R. F. Wilson, a junior letterman from Monroe, will see action for the first time after being sidelined with a broken finger. He'll back up Ken Newton at left half.

The Homecoming game will be the last for eight Northeast players seniors Jim Love, Joe Alewine, Don King, Stanley Starr, Mike Cooper, Ken Newton, Morris Douglas and Willie Ragan. All have been valuable performers this season.

Southeastern's Lions have won or shared a total of six Gulf States Conference titles and tied for second last year. They were rather unimpressive early this season but seemed to jell last Saturday when they rolled up 521 yards and 36 points to outclass Corpus Christi.

Carroll Tallies Victory No. 34; Merrill Stopped

The Carroll High Bulldogs scored their 34th consecutive football victory in a 40-20 sweep over Merrill of Pine Bluff, Ark., in the Bulldog homecoming game Friday night.

Carroll scored in every quarter and made all extra point tries good with the booting of James Harris.

Merrill's Thurman Mitchell started the scoring by recovering a Bulldog fumble and going 55 yards for the touchdown.

But the Bulldogs played circles around the visitors after that with Harris passing to Raymond Simmons for 16 yards good for the first touchdown.

The Carroll then passed 30 yards to William Greer for another tally in the first period.

Other Carroll touchdowns were done by Joe Everett, Joe Baker, and two by Ralph Cheffin. Cheffin scored his game-closers on 45 and 37 yard runs.

Kirol Captures Elementary Loop Crown; 8-0 Mark

The Kirols Comets rolled over Drew 14-0 Thursday at Kirol field and won the West Monroe Elementary League with a record of 8-0.

Buddy Fisher picked up both touchdowns for the Comets, and Jeff Hendricks and John Gentry scored the PAT's on runs.

Mike Clark, David Hargus, David Hudson, and Mike Colvin were outstanding on the defensive.

TWO OF Southeastern's host of speedy backs are junior halfbacks Ellis Johnson (left) and Jerry Dunaway. Johnson, a 185-pounder, led all Lion rushers a year ago with 323 yards. Dunaway, who weighs 175, was second behind Johnson and averaged 4.6 yards a carry.

Mason Rudolph Nears Victory

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Mason Rudolph strengthened his bid for a wire to wire victory in the $25,000 Fresno Open Golf Tournament when he fired a 5-under par 67 Friday for a 133 total and a five-stroke lead at the halfway mark.

Rudolph, who hasn't won a tournament since 1959 but ranks 10th on this year's PGA money winning list, was hot with his irons in his 34-33 round over the 7,181-yard, par 36-36-72 San Joaquin Country Club course.

Tommy Aaron stayed in second place with a 68-70-138 and had a one-stroke edge over third-place Buster Cupit, who carded a 68 Friday for his 139 total.

After a drive into the rough on the 589-yard 18th, Rudolph came out short from a difficult lie but belted a No. 8 iron shot within three feet of the pin for another birdie. He earlier had birdied the 12th and 14th but three-putted the 16th and 40 feet for a bogey.

He dropped a three-foot birdie putt at the par 5 third hole but drove into a trap and bogeyed the 186-yard fourth.

TWIN CITY CHAMPS

Rebs In Homecoming Victory Over Ouachita

By KEITH PRINCE
World Sports Writer

West Monroe High celebrated its Homecoming in a big way Friday night with a 32-6 victory over cross-town rival Ouachita, and in the process racked up the Twin City football title.

The Rebels had already defeated Neville this season and the lopsided win over Ouachita, before a packed house, officially gave them the crown — at least for a year.

Coach Cecil Pirkey's troupes simply had too much power for the game Lions, who were badly outwitted.

The Rebels scored in every quarter while collecting 19 first downs and a total of 392 yards.

Biggest man of all, offensive line, for West Monroe was reserve fullback Bill Edgar who scored two touchdowns and rammed his way for 114 yards. The yard return by Crain gave the Rebels possession on the Ouachita 49 from where they struck swiftly again, scoring in seven plays. Edgar rambled for 18 at the 40 and Frazier went from the 15 to the five on a second down play.

Quarterback Jim Mathis, who directed the entire drive, tallied from the two on an option play. With the clock stopped showing 0:07 left in the third, Alexander finally found the PAT range and West Monroe led 25-6.

After both teams swapped punts for much of the fourth quarter, West Monroe finally put a 56 yard scoring drive together behind the signal calling of Mathis and running of Edgar and Frazier. The senior quarterback rolled to the left, ran for about five yards and then pitched to Frazier who had clear sailing for the other 10 yards to paydirt. Alexander converted for a 32-6 lead with 1:12 remaining.

Ruston Romps

RUSTON (Special) — Quarterback Melvin Ray Shows and halfback Wayne Parkman led Ruston to its sixth victory Friday night with a 55-21 trouncing of North Caddo.

Parkman accounted for two of the Bearcats' eight tallies on runs of three and 17 yards, and Shows took credit for three. The smooth quarterback tallied twice on runs of 25 and two yards, and hit Jack Trammell on a 20 yarder for the third marker.

George Smith scored once on a 25 yard run, and Tommy Folk and Mike Russell teamed up for a 57-yard passing counter. Fullback Billy Adney picked up seven points on conversions after all but one of the eight touchdowns.

North Caddo quarterback Phil Robertson threw two touchdowns passes to Bill Conly for 78 yards and John Hall for six. Mike Ryan got the third marker on a two yard run. George Byron got all three PAT's.

The Bearcats netted 383 yards total, with 250 coming on the ground. North Caddo picked up 220 through the air, but only 59 on the ground.

Bolton, 26-6

ALEXANDRIA, La. (AP) — Fleet-footed Glen D'Amico rushed for 97 yards and scored one touchdown as he sparked Bolton of Alexandria to a 26-6 triple-A victory over Sulphur Friday night.

D'Amico's touchdown came on a one-yard run. The Bears, in winning their first southwest division game, also got markers from Richie Golmon on a two-yard dive; Buck Diron on a 38-yard pass from Ken Murchison; and tackle J. J. Micheles who picked up a fumble and raced five yards into the end zone.

For Sulphur, which received its first setback in district competition, Frank Blake scored on a six-yard blast.

TWIN CITY CHAMPS

Rebs In Homecoming Victory Over Ouachita

By KEITH PRINCE
World Sports Writer

West Monroe High celebrated its Homecoming in a big way Friday night with a 32-6 victory over cross-town rival Ouachita, and in the process racked up the Twin City football title.

The Rebels had already defeated Neville this season and the lopsided win over Ouachita, before a packed house, officially gave them the crown — at least for a year.

Coach Cecil Pirkey's troupes simply had too much power for the game Lions, who were badly outwitted.

The Rebels scored in every quarter while collecting 19 first downs and a total of 392 yards. Biggest man of all, offensive line, for West Monroe, was reserve fullback Bill Edgar who scored two touchdowns and rammed his way for 114 yards. The Playing for starter Chuck Crawford who did his damage in the first half with 74 yards on six carries, Edgar hauled the pigskin for a whopping 102 yards on 10 tries, including one 37 yarder.

Crawford's 90 yards, 51 by Danny Perkins, 32 by Ray Alexander and 29 by Raymond Frazier did most of the damage for West Monroe but it could have been even worse had it not been for some fine defensive work by two little Ouachita halfbacks — Dick McNair and Johnny Knighten.

Both of these mighty-mights are sophomores. McNair, who weighs in at 135, had six individual tackles in the secondary and Knighten, a 150-pound huss, had five.

REBS SCORE EARLY
West Monroe won the toss, elected to receive, and just 3:53 seconds later had its first tally. The quick scoring drive featured the running of the "Big Bull" Crawford who picked up 36 yards of the total 74 during the eight play march.

Halfback Perkins also sparked the drive with 20 yards, all of it coming on one run. Crawford was awarded the scoring honors on a third down play

LOU PROCTER

Lou Procter isn't too happy these days. He still plays a whale of a game of football for Drake.

But he can't beat his girl at tennis. The main reason is that the 22-year old senior lost his right hand in an industrial accident last June. "I figure a guy could play football without any hands if he wants to bad enough," Procter said. But Mertes, his coach, agrees. "I play him because he's good enough and for no other reason." Procter, apparently, is good enough. Mertes held him out of the first two games because he wasn't sure the arm was ready. Drake lost both. With Procter playing the team defeated South Dakota and Iowa State in the next two. Against South Dakota he recovered a fumble, knocked down a pass and was the defensive standout of the game.

The Guessing Game

Florida 21, LSU 14 Louisiana State's surprising young sophomores knocked off Georgia Tech, one of the major powers in the SEC. But that was in happier, healthier days for the Bayou Bengals. Besides, it was in Tiger stadium. For several years LSU has used the same nail holes to tack the Gator skin to the wall. By now, Florida, which handed "Bear" Bryant his first home loss at Alabama, may be getting just a wee bit tired of spending the winter in the Tiger trophy room. Southeastern 21, Northeast 20 Jack Rowan's injury-smitten young warriors have played just about as good football as they have been capable of this year. Last Saturday, they played way over their heads against a fine McNeese team. Past years, however, have seen Northeast following excellent performances with a complete reversal of form (the Delta State game last year for example). Nor have the Indians saved their finest hour to thrill the old grads at Homecoming (the Northwestern game last year for example). Despite the inexperience and the injuries, Northeast could pull this one out of the fire. But it will take an outstanding performance to do it. Louisiana Tech 20, Arlington State 14 The Bulldogs can be likened to a teenager with growing will get underway in Hemingway Stadium at 2 p.m. The audience expected should reach 22,000.

Saturday's meeting, the 40th in a 70-year-old series, finds the Johnny Rebs well favored and the Commodores hopeful of an upset, on the basis of steady improvement since the start of the season.

Ole Miss holds decision over Kentucky, Houston and Tulane following a season-opening deadlock with Memphis State. Vandy is without a victory, but both nationally-ranked Alabama and Florida were pushed to the limit in winning.

The Rebs are defending Conference champions and have designs on their sixth league crown. Toward that goal a Homecoming triumph is an absolute must. They have won their last 10 league starts.

The Rebel offense revolves around the throwing and running of quarterbacks Perry Lee Dunn, a senior craftsman, and Jim Weatherly, a skilled junior. The Commodore counterpart is Jon Cleveland, a senior who saddled Bama and Gator defenses with 15 completions in 29 attempts for 259 yards.

The contrast in quarterback dueling may well decide the issue.

Ole Miss is leading the Southeastern in total offense and aerial yardage, but not by its usual red hot pace in rushing and passing. However, the air arm has been productive on the basis of 172.5 yards a game and seven (of ten) touchdowns. The total offense figure is 326.5 yards. Dunn ranks third in SEC throwing, completing 28 of 49 for 493 yards and five touchdowns. Weatherly's rating is 14

Bills Of Buffalo, Giants Favored

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK AP — The same fella who thought the 49ers would be easy for the Chicago Bears last Sunday thinks the Cleveland Browns will be edged out by the New York Giants this week.

The big game is at Cleveland, where the Giants hope to salvage their Eastern Conference title chances against the still-unbeaten Browns. Cleveland is 6-0 and New York and St. Louis are second at 4-2. One more defeat and out for the trailers the way the Browns are going in their surprising resurgence under Blanton Collier.

Another big one in the National League is at Baltimore, where the Green Bay Packers, having drawn even finally with the Chicago Bears at 5-1 in the Western Conference—will try to prove they can stay that way although quarterback Bart Starr is out definitely with a broken hand.

Last week's efforts could have been forgotten. A 5-5 performance cut the over-all record to 40-20-1 for .667. Once more:

Stock Racing Billed Sunday At Shreveport

SHREVEPORT (Special) — A big field of the nation's best professional drivers are set to blast off into late model stock car racing action this Saturday and Sunday afternoon, Oct. 26 and 27 to wind up the national new car racing season for the year.

The Louisiana State Fair speedway proved super fast last week as Dick Hutchinson of Keokuk Iowa rolled to a new 10 lap world record and Texan Jerry Douglas sped to the first major victory of his career in the 100 lap feature race.

Saturdays racing card will be series of sprint races starting with time trials at 2:00 p.m. Preliminary heat races will precede the feature race. On Sunday afternoon (October 27) the cars and drivers go in the annual 150 laps feature race with a 30 second mandatory pit stop. Points won in all competition will count toward the 1963 national championship.

Held on Onondaga Lake near Syracuse, N.Y., since 1952, the IRA rowing championships were previously conducted on the Hudson and Ohio rivers, on Cayuga Lake and on Saratoga lake.

Intersectional scrap with Arlington State at Arlington, Tex., Saturday night. Jack Hopkins, Waterproof junior who had his best game last week against Northwestern with 63 yards in 12 carries, moves up to the No. 1 left halfback post because of injuries to Paul Labenne. Reeves, who has played mostly on defense, and Wurzbarger, who hasn't seen much service, will play behind Hopkins.

The Techsters got good news Friday when it was learned that junior halfback Jack Odom was well enough to play.

Maurice Greer, another freshman from Vidalia, moves up to the alternate unit to replace Pat Lynch of New Orleans, who may be out for the season as a result of a knee injury.

Freshman have been playing key roles for the Bulldogs. C. T. (Speedy) Campbell of Sulphur has become the club's place-kicker, accounting for 15 points against USL with a TD, field goal and six conversions. He hasn't missed a PAT try but one was blocked.

Jimmy Jones, Reeves' running mate at Jonesboro, is another frosh halfback who has been seeing heavy duty. Fullback Tommy Linder of Shreveport Woodlawn has played some, as well as his ex-prep teammate Paul Clark.

Bob McKinnon of Junction City and Wayne Matthews of Springhill are two frosh guards who have been playing and are ticketed for future stardom with the Canines.

Labenne, one of the tri-captains, has missed three games and may not be available anytime this season.

After the Arlington tilt, the Techmen move on to Tennessee Tech and Southeastern for other road contests.

Tribe Distance Team Captures Second Victory

LAKE CHARLES (Special) — Northeast State scored their second cross country victory of the season by defeating McNeese State, 20-51 (low score wins), here Friday.

Northeast defeated Northwestern State in the Tribe's first outing last week.

Ted Jackson, a Candian attending McNeese, led the three-mile distance with a 15:48 clocking.

The next six finishers were Tribesmen with Bill Smith close on Jackson's heels in 15:52.

The following Northeast clinchers were Bill White, 16:09; Jim Bodin, 16:18; David Hanks, 16:58; Barry Harwell, 17:27; and Gayland LeBlanc, 18:03.

HIKE GETS SMALL MARGIN: FAILED IN 1ST ATTEMPT

Baton Rouge—Gov. Jimmie H. Davis gained four additional votes Wednesday—two from Ouachita parish—as his one-cent sales tax squeaked through the House by just one vote over the required two-thirds majority.

Only three votes shy before Christmas, Davis' leaders got the support of Rep. LAWRENCE GIBBS, Rep. MIKE JOHN JR., both of Monroe, and Rep. Woodrow Wilson, Bastrop, for final passage.

JOHN, GIBBS, and Wilson all voted against the tax when it was first considered.

JOHN DENIES INFLUENCE OF PRESSURE

Rep. MIKE JOHN, JR. told the Monroe Jaycees yesterday that "PRESSURE AND POLITICS" had nothing to do with his switch voted in favor of the one-cent sales tax.

Predicting the Senate would approve the tax, JOHN said, "PRESSURE AND POLITICS MEAN NOTHING TO ME. I AM GUIDED BY PRINCIPLE."

He addressed the Jaycees at a luncheon, touching on the sales tax and other actions of the legislature.

"WHEN I KNEW WHERE THE MONEY WAS DEDICATED, IT TOOK ME LESS THAN A MINUTE TO MAKE UP MY MIND," JOHN stated.

He was one of three Northeast Louisiana lawmakers who reversed their stands to vote in favor of the tax last Wednesday. Rep. LAWRENCE GIBBS, Monroe, and Rep. Woodrow Wilson, Bastrop, also changed.

JOHN told the Jaycees he changed his mind by submitting an amendment to dedicate the $28 million from the tax to private, segregated schools.

"I AM THANKFUL THAT NO PRESSURE WAS PUT ON ME ONE WAY OR ANOTHER," JOHN explained.

GIBBS, JOHN CHANGE VOTES ON TAX HIKE

Many taxpayers and voters in Ouachita parish were amazed and dismayed to learn that Representatives LAWRENCE GIBBS and MIKE JOHN JR., switched and voted in the House for the one-cent sales tax increase, thereby assuring approval of the proposal.

However, the switch by MR. GIBBS was not near so surprising as was the vote of MR. JOHN. MR. GIBBS, since voting against the tax December 21, had been known to be "on the fence" and had publicly stated he was really "undecided" what to do. Obviously, it didn't take him long to make up his mind for sure after arriving back in Baton Rouge this week to vote for the increase.

MR. JOHN had repeatedly said he would not vote for the tax increase at the present time because it was not needed for the current segregation fight. He had issued statements to this effect to this newspaper and had so spoken before several civic clubs in Monroe and West Monroe.

In a statement carried by this newspaper on January 3, one day before he voted for it, REPRESENTATIVE JOHN said in part...

"IN MY MANY, MANY CONTACTS DURING THE PAST 10 DAYS, I HAVE FOUND A GREAT MAJORITY OF THE PEOPLE OPPOSED TO ANY TAX INCREASE AT THIS TIME. I HAVE ALSO FOUND MANY PEOPLE WHO DO NOT HAVE ALL OF THE FACTS AT HAND. THERE IS A CALCULATED AND GREAT RISK THAT THE PROPOSED SALES TAX CANNOT BE LEGALLY USED TO FINANCE PRIVATE SCHOOLS INASMUCH AS THE SALES TAX DOLLARS AND THEIR VERY USE WOULD BE RESTRICTED TO A PUBLIC SCHOOL... IT IS WRONG THEREFORE TO ADD A $28 MILLION TAX BURDEN ON THIS STATE UNTIL SUCH TIME AS THERE IS (1) A NEED, (2) JUSTIFICATION, AND (3) ASSURANCE THAT THE MONEY CAN AND WILL BE SPENT FOR THE PURPOSE FOR WHICH IT HAS BEEN COLLECTED."

On December 30, JOHN said that he found that the people of Ouachita parish were "overwhelmingly against a sales tax increase" at this time.

There obviously has been no change in the people's feelings and certainly there has been no assurance from anyone that any move to use tax funds to maintain private segregated schools would not be declared unconstitutional by the first federal court that hears such a case.

Representative GIBBS, judging from his many statements on the issue, had been swinging back toward voting for the tax nearly from the minute he voted against it. He said after voting for it that he felt "that I have a charge from the people of Ouachita parish to vote for this 'temporary tax' and that a majority wanted it."

However, he appears to have ignored the fact that people from every walk of life in Ouachita parish—laboring men, merchants, businessmen—voiced strong opposition to the increase and have sent telegrams to the legislators opposing it. He also appears to have ignored the fact that MR. JOHN found the opposite to be true.

Certainly we along with a vast majority of the people of this parish and area want segregation maintained. BUT WE DON'T BELIEVE A MAJORITY OF THE PEOPLE FEEL A TAX IS NECESSARY AT THIS TIME, AND THAT THEY DO NOT APPRECIATE THE SWITCH MADE BY OUACHITA'S TWO REPRESENTATIVES. AND WE BELIEVE A MAJORITY OF THE PEOPLE OF THIS PARISH WILL STRONGLY VOICE THEIR DISAPPROVAL OF THIS VOTE CHANGE AT THE APPROPRIATE TIME.

YOUR PROBLEMS
People Air Complaints About Modern Drugs
By ANN LANDERS

DEAR ABBY: I notice in your column so many people complaining about the high cost of drugs. I, for one, would never complain. If sulphadiazine had been in existence in 1933, I might have had a pair of twin sons celebrating their 30th birthdays this Christmas.

"BLUE BOOTIES"
DEAR ABBY: Today's prescription is the biggest bargain in history. Mozart, the great Austrian composer, died at the age of 35 with a simple fever! Robert Louis Stevenson died at 44 with tuberculosis. Felix Mendelssohn, 38; Jack London, 40; Robert Burns, 37; Chopin, 39; Keats, 26; Lord Byron, 36; Jean Harlow, 26; Rudolph Valentino, 31; George Gershwin, 39; Thomas Wolfe, 38. Think what these talented people might have accomplished had they lived another 30 or 35 years! Modern drugs almost surely would have extended their lives.

NO COMPLAINTS
DEAR ABBY: I was shocked to learn that people are stupid

enough to resent not being able to return medicine. There is a law which prohibits returning prescribed drugs. This for the consumer's protection. How does the pharmacist know what has happened to the drugs once they have left his store? Wouldn't the crooks have a field day ordering drugs in capsule form, extracting the medication, filling the capsules with sugar and returning them to the store!

Garden flowers in autumn shades were used in arrangements throughout the Young home for the party. White and gold candles and a crystal punch bowl were seen on the refreshment table which was draped its length with a white ribbon lettered in gold "Lester and Bonnie, October 26, 1963."

Negro Shoots Two Others At Angola

ANGOLA, La. (AP) — An inmate guard at the Louisiana prison here shot to death another guard and seriously injured a third Friday, Warden Victor Walker said.

Almer Randle, 22-year-old Negro serving life for murder in Webster Parish, had just been issued his rifle, the warden said, to go out with a prison farm work detail.

The inmate guard, one of about 150 at the state prison, walked into a dormitory at old Camp II, Walker said, and opened fire on Willie Venson, 42, and Benjamin Franklin, 31, also Negro inmate guards.

Venson died soon afterward at the prison hospital of a bullet wound of the chest. Franklin was taken to New Orleans charity hospital for treatment for left forearm and chest injuries. Walker said he did not know the motive behind the shooting.

Randle, of Bradley, Ark., was serving life for the slaying of his wife in 1961.

After the shooting, the warden said, Randle walked outside the dormitory, still with two bullets in the .351 rifle, and surrendered the weapon to Charles O. Cochran, supervisor on the prison custodial force. He was held in the prison here while the West Feliciana Parish coroner conducted an inquest.

Venson was serving three years for theft in Orleans Parish. He had been received at the prison in February, 1962.

Franklin, of Walker, La., was serving 15 years for aggravated battery in Livingston Parish, and for two counts of burglary.

Venson and Franklin were unarmed when the shooting occurred.

Decorating Advice

Q: I have a very long narrow hallway with one side broken by doorways, a closet and a small hall. Please suggest how I can treat the long unbroken wall in a way that will not be overpowering in a small apartment. Because the wall has a textured surface, I cannot use wallpaper or mural.

A: What would you think of making a gallery out of this space. Gradually, you could start collecting prints, drawings, weavings and embroideries. Ones that particularly appeal to you. There are even some beautiful travel posters that are not too difficult to come by.

Q: I'd like a little help in decorating a guest room in a house I have in Florida. Walls are fawn with white woodwork and the floor is white vinyl tile with small design in two shades of green. What color shall I use for draperies and bedspread?

A: Have draperies and dust ruffle in a small scale floral print in a white ground with fawn and shades of green. The spread could be either fawn or white and have a bright green scatter rug.

Why Grow Old

It might not be happy for every woman to see herself as others see her. The woman who has a pad of fat on her abdomen or hips which protrude or are weighted with fatty deposits often fails to realize how she looks. When she takes a look at herself in the mirror she just naturally pulls her tummy in, tucks her hips under and

Festive Party Good Antidote For Mischief

One of the best deterrents for Hallowe'en mischief is a Hallowe'en party.

Here is an anniversary that might have been created for the delight of small fry. There is the opportunity to dress up in laughter - provoking costumes, to play odd and unusual games, and last but certainly not least, to eat the kind of food that youngsters regard as ambrosia from the gods - doughnuts, hot-dogs, hamburgers and plenty of soda pop.

Violet Hackim, home adviser, suggests that if the youngster who is to be host or hostess has any talent as an embryo artist, invitations might be homemade. These could be pumpkins cut from sheets of orange craft paper with the name of the youngster, the date and the hour of the party printed in black. If homemade invitations are not desirable the variety store will have a selection.

Decorations for Hallowe'en can be festive and imaginative, adds Miss Hackim. Hats, favors, paper pumpkins, black cats, bats and witches can do much to add to the feeling of Hallowe'en.

In the matter of games there should be no trouble planning enough to keep them well occupied. For a new twist to the pin-on game why not have thine pin a nose on a Jack-O-Lantern? For another game, why not try Hunt - the - Witch? Use a large paper witch, detach her hat and broomstick. Fashion a cauldron from black and red paper. Hide the witch, her hat, the cauldron and the broom stick in different places and award prizes for the youngsters who find them.

When it comes to refreshments the best rule is, "Keep them simple." After their strenuous play the youngsters undoubtedly will be thirsty. Have plenty of beverages on hand. Use paper cups with Hallowe'en motif. There will be no danger of breakage and they can be disposed of easily after the party.

Hot dogs grilled in the oven with rolls, popcorn, a big basket of doughnuts and small cakes iced with Hallowe'en decorations will make good party fare, says the adviser, and paper plates can be utilized.

And the day after Hallowe'en you'll have no complaints from neighbors about depredations caused by youngsters who just wanted to "celebrate."

HINTS FROM HELOISE Thanks To All For Down-To-Earth Hints

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

Has anyone ever suggested moving the iron and ironing board into the bedroom? I know this may sound odd, but for me it is just the thing.

I get so tired of looking at the kitchen walls. It seems I spend most of my time in the kitchen preparing meals, sorting clothes, preparing baby's formula, putting away groceries, etc. Just being in another room is helpful.

The other day in a mood of daring to be different, I set up my ironing board in the bedroom, turned on the radio and listened to some relaxing concert music as I ironed. Believe me, I am always going to iron in there from now on. "Just to get away from it all!"

On second thought, we quote "bed and board" so why not have an ironing board in the bedroom?

My neighbor across the way is really a clever gal. On the last really hot day we had, I noticed her ironing out in the back yard! How about that? Thelma Foley

Go pour that neighbor a cup of coffee for us. I think the idea is great, and so is yours. Heloise

Dear Folks: It's time for me to take up a little space today and thank you again for all of your human, down-to-earth, hints which you have so willingly shared. I love you dearly.

You should have a special blessing today, tomorrow and always.

I thank you from the bottom of my heart. God Bless each of you. Heloise

Dear Heloise: Before I use a new baby blanket or cotton flannel bed blanket I soak it for ten minutes in clear warm water. I then squeeze out most of the water and let it drip dry. Be sure not to wring them.

Hang the blanket in a warm place to dry, then press on both sides with a warm, not hot, iron. This will set the mat and the

Dear Heloise: For those who are on a tight budget and want something different, I suggest they make small hamburger patties and cook them in a cast iron skillet. Then all you have to do is pour in a can of onion soup, after browning the hamburgers, and let it simmer awhile.

You will have the most delicious dinner you can imagine. The gravy is absolutely wonderful.

YOUR PROBLEMS

People Air Complaints About Modern Drugs

By ANN LANDERS

DEAR ABBY: I notice in your column so many people complaining about the high cost of drugs. I, for one, would never complain. If sulphadiazine had been in existence in 1933, I might have had a pair of twin sons celebrating their 30th birthdays this Christmas.

"BLUE BOOTIES"

DEAR ABBY: Today's prescription is the biggest bargain in history. Mozart, the great Austrian composer, died at the age of 35 with a simple fever! Robert Louis Stevenson died at 44 with tuberculosis. Felix Mendelssohn, 38; Jack London, 40; Robert Burns, 37; Chopin, 39; Keats, 26; Lord Byron, 36; Jean Harlow, 26; Rudolph Valentino, 31; George Gershwin, 39; Thomas Wolfe, 38. Think what these talented people might have accomplished had they lived another 30 or 35 years! Modern drugs almost surely would have extended their lives.

DEAR ABBY: I was shocked to learn that people are stupid

enough to resent not being able to return medicine. There is a law which prohibits returning prescribed drugs. This is for the pharmacist's protection. How does the pharmacist know what has happened to the drugs once they have left his store? Wouldn't the crooks have a field day ordering drugs in capsule form, extracting the medication, filling the capsules with sugar and returning them to the store!

Rocky Heads Home From West Tour

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller headed home for New York Friday, pleased by a California reception he termed "fantastic, far better than I anticipated."

He came West to test his popularity against his expected rival, Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona. He says he will announce in two weeks whether he will seek the Republican presidential nomination.

In a whirlwind two days in San Francisco and Los Angeles, Rockefeller sped smiling through speeches and news conferences, private meetings and public receptions, looking every inch a candidate.

In his public pronouncements he pointed up what he said are differences with Goldwater.

In his final activity here, a taped interview at television station KNXT, there was this question and answer:

"Last night Sen. Goldwater said he felt local commanders in Europe should be given freedom to use nuclear weapons without first getting presidential approval. Do you agree to that?"

"No, I would disagree. I think that you've got to have a central control of nuclear weapons by the president, by the NATO command structure, and then from there out to the individual commanders. I don't think that you can have individual commanders going on the offensive—even if they are going with ground troops—against the policy of the operation as a whole. It's got to be a coordinated action. And I think it would be very dangerous to have individual commanders popping off on their own."

Earlier the governor took issue with the senator about the United Nations, right-to-work laws, foreign aid and income taxes.

Rockefeller at one point dubbed himself the underdog in the event of a presidential primary with Goldwater, who has a substantial following in California. One local Rockefeller supporter had this comment after seeing the governor in action: "We're a long way from being dead."

Ike Accused Of Treason By Birchite

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert Welch, founder of the John Birch Society, Thursday night accused former President Eisenhower of treason and said that the late John Foster Dulles was a Communist.

Welch was interviewed on "Ladies of the Press," a taped news panel program on WOR-TV.

Moderator Clifford Evans, in prefatory remarks, said the society is described by some as a "right-wing patriotic group devoted to stamping out the Communist conspiracy." Others, Evans continued, say it is "a witch-hunting organization engaged in irresponsible attacks on public figures."

One of the panelists asked Welch, "Sir, may I ask you have you changed your mind about the charge of Communist you once leveled at former President Eisenhower?"

Welch said, "Well, my only way of answering that is to tell you to read my book and judge for yourself."

He was then asked by Evans if he could answer for himself. "No, you cannot answer that in that short compass. I have never stated publicly any such thing."

"Well, not publicly, in your book," Evans interposed.

Welch said, "I have stated some things in a private letter with a lot of qualifications around it."

He added that "What I have published is there for anybody to read, and in it I point out that there are two or three possible interpretations or explanations of the course taken by President Eisenhower, and you can take your choice."

Later, he was asked by another panelist, "Well, can I ask if you believe this statement which you wrote in the Politician 'For Eisenhower there is only one word to describe his purposes and action. That word is treason.'"

"Yes," Welch replied. "Do you describe John Foster Dulles (the late former secretary of state) as a Communist in it?" (the letter).

Welch: "I described John Foster Dulles as a Communist. I say he was a Communist."

Welch declined to say whether he favored Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona for the Republican nomination for president next year.

He said the Birch Society as such takes no position in politics and that if he were to express an opinion personally it would be construed as the position of the society.

Asked whether Birch members supported or opposed former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, the 1960 GOP presidential candidate and mentioned as a possibility again next year, Welch said: "Well, that's up to them, and it has varied with different times."

Gary Powers Obtains License For Marriage

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) — Francis Gary Powers, whose U2 plane was shot down in Soviet territory, obtained a license Friday to marry Claudia Edwards Downey, 28, Arlington.

The license issued by the Arlington County clerk showed they plan to be married today at Catlett, Va., about 40 miles southwest of Washington.

The license listed both as divorced but gave no further information.

Powers won a divorce decree last Jan. 16 from Barbara Powers, whom he charged with habitual drunkenness. She lives in Milledgeville, Ga.

Powers is now employed as an engineering test pilot for Lockheed Aircraft Corp., Burbank, Calif.

He was shot down while flying a U2 plane on a reconnaissance mission over the Soviet Union May 1, 1960. He was tried on spy charges in a Moscow court in August, 1960, and was sentenced to "10 years deprivation of liberty."

He was released Feb. 16, 1962, and returned to this country in exchange for Col. Rudolph I. Abel, a Soviet spy convicted and sentenced to prison in the United States.

LELAND CARPENTER

Carpenter Bids For Re-Election To Police Jury

Leland T. Carpenter, 40-year-old carbon plant operator, has announced his candidacy for re-election in Ward 2 to the Ouachita Parish Police Jury in the December 7th first primary.

A resident of Ward 2 for 12 years, Carpenter pledged "continued representation of all the people of my ward."

He is the father of three children.

Carpenter, who graduated from Delhi High School, has been employed here for the past 12 years. He is a Mason and a member of the Ouachita Farm Bureau and the Swartz Baptist Church.

Carpenter is a veteran of World War II.

Here is his announcement: "As a member of the Ouachita Parish Police Jury for the past four years, I have attempted to represent all the people of Ward 2 with fairness and honesty."

"I think that Ward 2 is more fortunate than most wards in the parish in that our problems are not nearly as serious as those of other wards. All of us know that we have made improvements in Ward 2 during recent years and that we must continue to make improvements in future years. To this I am pledged."

"The record is clear. During the past four years, Ward 2 has received 10.4 miles of new asphalt roads, plus 16.2 miles of old asphalt roads. Our drainage improvements have amounted to 3.8 miles, while new gravel construction miles came to 4.9 miles."

"In addition, we have reconstructed 4.5 miles, plus adding three new bridges and improved 5.8 miles of roads with wash gravel."

"We are proud of this Ward 2 record, because it reflects one of progress."

"As a juror, I have always been available to the people to discuss our various problems and needs. I have worked for everyone. If re-elected, I will continue to do so."

Because of Monroe's growth, Ward 2 also is growing. Our population is on the increase and with more people come more problems. I sincerely believe that my experience will be of benefit to this growing ward if the people are kind enough to return me to the Police Jury."

"Finally, those who know me know that I am a conservative in my political thinking, that I believe in home-rule and that I try to practice what I believe in."

"Your vote and support will be fully acknowledged and sincerely appreciated. Vote for No. 129."

Loans Annulled For Cuban Farmers

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Farmers in the eastern Cuban provinces affected by Hurricane Flora will not be required to repay principal or interest on loans from Cuba's National Bank, Havana radio said Friday.

Fluoride Inhibits Growth Of Cells, Researchers Say

LONDON (UPI) — Three Oxford researchers said Friday they have laboratory evidence that sodium fluoride of one-twentieth of the strength of fluoridated drinking water inhibits the growth of human cells.

Writing in the British Medical Journal, Dr. Roger Berry, Helen Hay Whitney and Wilfred Trillwood said their findings did not necessarily mean fluoridated water is unsafe. But they said they believed more research into the effects of fluoride is needed.

"This is probably the first indication of the toxicity of fluoride in high dilution to human and animal cells in a test tube environment," they said. "The test tube conditions may not reproduce the condition which exists in the human body where body cells may be protected from the harmful effects of drugs and chemicals by protective mechanisms. But the existence and nature of fluoride protective mechanisms are matters more for speculation than of fact."

Decorating Advice

Q: I have a very long narrow hallway with one side broken by doorways, a closet and a small hall. Please suggest how I can treat the long unbroken wall in a way that will not be overpowering in a small apartment. Because the wall has a textured surface. I cannot use wallpaper or mural.

A: What would you think of making a gallery out of this space. Gradually, you could start collecting prints, drawings, weavings and embroideries. Ones that particularly appeal to you. There are even some beautiful travel posters that are not too difficult to come by.

Q: I'd like a little help in decorating a guest room in a house I have in Florida. Walls are fawn with white woodwork and the floor is white vinyl tile with small design in two shades of green. What color shall I use for draperies and bedspread?

A: Have draperies and dust ruffle in a small scale floral print in a white ground with fawn and shades of green. The spread could be either fawn or white and have a bright green scatter rug.

Why Grow Old

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

It might not be happy for every woman to see herself as others see her. The woman who has a pad of fat on her abdomen or hips which protrude or are weighted with fatty deposits often fails to realize how she looks. When she takes a look at herself in the mirror she just naturally pulls her tummy in, tucks her hips under and straightens her spine. BUT, when she leaves the mirror she may relax into her old habits of posture. She may not be conscious of how she looks to others because she is not in front of the mirror when she lets go.

AS a woman grows older it takes more effort to keep her girlish figure. She must exercise more faithfully and watch her food intake more carefully. A flat abdomen adds greatly to a youthful appearance and it is also a health booster. Lack of exercise, child bearing and overweight, predispose a woman to weakened lax abdominal muscles. This in turn may cause internal organs to slump. Some of the results of this are fatigue, backache and constipation. Sometimes this condition occurs when a woman is so underweight that she does not have enough fat on the abdomen to help support her internal organs.

I think that the average woman is better off wearing a girdle except in early youth, and sometimes even then. Few women have strong enough abdominal muscles to give proper support. If your girdle is right for you it will be possible for you to pull your abdomen in and hold it in whenever you can remember to think about it. At other times your girdle will take over for you. Be sure that your girdle supports from below, pushing up instead of mashing down. Many very thin women have backaches because of a fallen stomach and would profit by the use of an abdominal support.

Decorations for Hallowe'en can be festive and imaginative, adds Miss Hackim. Hats, favors, paper pumpkins, black cats, bats and witches can do much to add to the feeling of Hallowe'en.

In the matter of games there should be no trouble planning enough to keep them well occupied. For a new twist to the pin-on game why not have theme pin a nose on a Jack-O-Lantern? For another game, why not try Hunt-the-Witch? Use a large paper witch, detach her hat and broomstick. Fashion a cauldron from black and red paper. Hide the witch, her hat, the cauldron and the broom stick in different places and award prizes for the youngsters who find them.

When it comes to refreshments the best rule is, "Keep them simple." After their strenuous play the youngsters undoubtedly will be thirsty. Have plenty of beverages on hand. Use paper cups with Hallowe'en motif. There will be no danger of breakage and they can be disposed of easily after the party.

Hot dogs grilled in the oven with rolls, popcorn, a big basket of doughnuts and small cakes iced with Hallowe'en decorations will make good party fare, says the adviser, and paper plates can be utilized.

And the day after Hallowe'en you'll have no complaints from neighbors about depredations caused by youngsters who just wanted to "celebrate."

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Thanks To All For Down-To-Earth Hints

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

Has anyone ever suggested moving the iron and ironing board into the bedroom? I know this may sound odd, but for me it is just the thing.

I get so tired of looking at the kitchen walls. It seems I spend most of my time in the kitchen preparing meals, sorting clothes, preparing baby's formula, putting away groceries, etc. Just being in another room is helpful.

The other day in a mood of daring to be different, I set up my ironing board in the bedroom, turned on the radio and listened to some relaxing concert music as I ironed. Believe me, I am always going to iron in there from now on. "Just to get away from it all!"

On second thought, we quote "bed and board" so why not have an ironing board in the bedroom?

My neighbor across the way is really a clever gal. On the last really hot day we had, I noticed her ironing out in the back yard! How about that?

Thelma Foley

Go pour that neighbor a cup of coffee for us. I think the idea is great, and so is yours.

Heloise

Dear Folks:

It's time for me to take up a little space today and thank you again for all of your human, down-to-earth, hints which you have so willingly shared. I love you dearly.

You should have a special blessing today, tomorrow and always.

I thank you from the bottom of my heart. God Bless each of you.

For those who are on a tight budget and want something different, I suggest they make small hamburger patties and cook them in a cast iron skillet. Then all you have to do is pour in a can of onion soup, after browning the hamburgers, and let it simmer awhile.

You will have the most delicious dinner you can imagine. The gravy is absolutely wonderful.

Rocky Heads Home From West Tour

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller headed home for New York Friday, pleased by a California reception he termed "fantastic, far better than I anticipated."

He came West to test his popularity against his expected rival, Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona. He says he will announce in two weeks whether he will seek the Republican presidential nomination.

In a whirlwind two days in San Francisco and Los Angeles, Rockefeller sped smilingly through speeches and news conferences, private meetings and public receptions, looking every inch a candidate.

In his public pronouncements he pointed up what he said are differences with Goldwater.

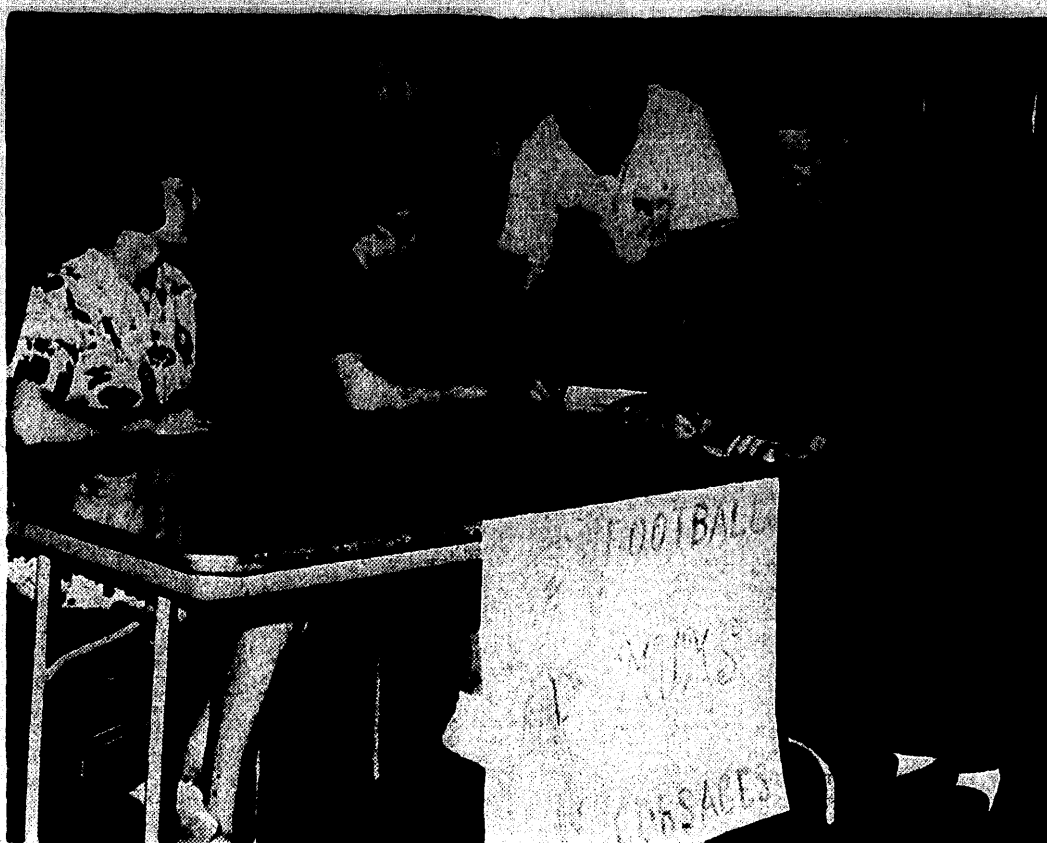

In his final activity here, a taped interview at television station KNXT, there was this question and answer:

"Last night Sen. Goldwater said he felt local commanders in Europe should be given freedom to use nuclear weapons without first getting presidential approval. Do you agree to that?"

"No. I would disagree. I think that you've got to have a central control of nuclear weapons by the president, by the NATO command structure, and then from there out to the individual commanders. I don't think that you can have individual commanders going on the offensive—even if they are going with ground troops—against the policy of the operation as a whole. It's got to be a coordinated action. And I think it would be very dangerous to have individual commanders popping off on their own."

Earlier the governor took issue with the senator about the United Nations, right-to-work laws, foreign aid and income taxes.

Rockefeller at one point rubbed himself the underdog in the event of a presidential primary with Goldwater, who has a substantial following in California. One local Rockefeller supporter had this comment after seeing the governor in action: "We're a long way from being dead."

Ike Accused Of Treason By Birchite

NEW YORK (AP) — Robert Welch, founder of the John Birch Society, Thursday night accused former President Eisenhower of treason and said that the late John Foster Dulles was a Communist.

Welch was interviewed on "Ladies of the Press," a taped news panel program on WOR-TV.

Moderator Clifford Evans, in prefatory remarks, said the society is described by some as a "right-wing patriotic group devoted to stamping out the Communist conspiracy." Others, Evans continued, say it is "a witch-hunting organization engaged in irresponsible attacks on public figures."

One of the panelists asked Welch, "Sir, may I ask have you changed your mind about the charge of Communist you once leveled at former President Eisenhower?"

Welch said, "Well, my only way of answering that is to tell you to read my book and judge for yourself."

He was then asked by Evans if he could answer for himself. "No, you cannot answer that in that short compass. I have never stated publicly any such thing."

"Well, not publicly, in your book," Evans interposed. Welch said, "I have stated some things in a private letter with a lot of qualifications around it."

He added that "What I have published is there for anybody to read, and in it I point out that there are two or three possible interpretations or explanations of the course taken by President Eisenhower, and you can take your choice."

Later, he was asked by another panelist, "Well, can I ask if you believe this statement which you wrote in the Politician 'For Eisenhower there is only one word to describe his purposes and action. That word is treason.'"

"Yes," Welch replied. Welch was asked also, "Do you describe John Foster Dulles (the late former secretary of state) as a Communist in it?" (the letter).

Welch: "I described John Foster Dulles as a Communist. I say he was a Communist."

Welch declined to say whether he favored Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona for the Republican nomination for president next year.

He said the Birch Society as such takes no position in politics and that if he were to express an opinion personally it would be construed as the position of the society.

Asked whether Birch members supported or opposed former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, the 1960 GOP presidential candidate and mentioned as a possibility again next year, Welch said: "Well, that's up to them, and it has varied with different times."

LELAND CARPENTER

Carpenter Bids For Re-Election To Police Jury

Leland T. Carpenter, 40-year-old carbon plant operator, has announced his candidacy for re-election in Ward 2 to the Ouachita Parish Police Jury in the December 7th first primary.

A resident of Ward 2 for 12 years, Carpenter pledged "continued representation of all the people of my ward."

He is the father of three children.

Carpenter, who graduated from Delhi High School, has been employed here for the past 12 years. He is a Mason and a member of the Ouachita Farm Bureau and the Swartz Baptist Church.

Carpenter is a veteran of World War II.

Here is his announcement: "As a member of the Ouachita Parish Police Jury for the past four years, I have attempted to represent all the people of Ward 2 with fairness and honesty."

"I think that Ward 2 is more fortunate than most wards in the parish in that our problems are not nearly as serious as those of other wards. All of us know that we have made improvements in Ward 2 during recent years and that we must continue to make improvements in future years. To this I am pledged."

"The record is clear. During the past four years, Ward 2 has received 10.4 miles of new asphalt roads, plus 16.2 miles of old asphalt roads. Our drainage improvements have amounted to 3.8 miles, while new gravel construction miles came to 4.9 miles."

"In addition, we have reconstructed 4.5 miles, plus adding three new bridges and improved 5.8 miles of roads with wash gravel."

"We are proud of this Ward 2 record, because it reflects one of progress."

"As a juror, I have always been available to the people to discuss our various problems and needs. I have worked for everyone. If re-elected, I will continue to do so."

Because of Monroe's growth, Ward 2 also is growing. Our population is on the increase and with more people come more problems. I sincerely believe that my experience will be of benefit to this growing ward if the people are kind enough to return me to the Police Jury."

"Finally, those who know me know that I am a conservative in my political thinking, that I believe in home-rule and that I try to practice what I believe in."

"Your vote and support will be fully acknowledged and sincerely appreciated. Vote for No. 129."

Loans Annulled For Cuban Farmers

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Farmers in the eastern Cuban provinces affected by Hurricane Flora will not be required to repay principal or interest on loans from Cuba's National Bank, Havana radio said Friday.

The broadcast, monitored here, said the bank issued a resolution Thursday pardoning all such loans.

DESPITE PERSECUTIONS

Iron Curtain Faith Brought To Council

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—Bishops from the "church of silence" Friday called on the Ecumenical Council to make public note of the faithfulness of Christians behind the Iron Curtain in spite of persecutions and oppressions.

The appeal was made as the council fathers began debate on a document which calls on all Christians — laymen and women as well as priests and members of religious orders—to lead holy lives.

During the session in St. Peter's Basilica, the council approved overwhelmingly a declaration that the Roman Catholic Church is prepared in conjunction with other Christian churches to fix the same Sunday each year for Easter.

In addition, the declaration endorsed international discussions on a so-called perpetual calendar under which any given date always would fall on the same day of the week every year. But it stipulated that in any reform of the civil calendar, the church must insist on the traditional seven-day week with a Sunday.

The vote on the declaration was 2,058 to 9.

By a vote of 2057 to 13, the fathers also approved another amendment to a pending liturgical reform document to make clear the veneration of saints and their "authentic relics and images."

Some conservative bishops feared that the custom was put in question by the previous silence of the document on the subject.

Archbishop Anton Banaik of Poznan, Poland, was the first representative from the "church of silence" to address the council at the session Friday.

Speaking on behalf of the entire hierarchy in Communist Poland, he said the council should recognize publicly the loyalty to Christ displayed by the millions of laymen and women under "very difficult circumstances" in countries where there is "oppression of religion."

The council adjourned until Tuesday. It was announced that Pope Paul VI will celebrate Mass in St. Peter's for the council fathers Monday in honor of the anniversary of the election of his predecessor, Pope John XXIII.

Fluoride Inhibits Growth Of Cells, Researchers Say

LONDON (UPI) — Three Oxford researchers said Friday they have laboratory evidence that sodium fluoride of one-twentieth of the strength of fluoridated drinking water inhibits the growth of human cells.

Writing in the British Medical Journal, Dr. Roger Berry, Helen Hay Whitney and Wilfred Trillwood said their findings did not necessarily mean fluoridated water is unsafe. But they said they believed more research into the effects of fluoride is needed.

"This is probably the first indication of the toxicity of fluoride in high dilution to human and animal cells in a test tube environment," they said. "The test tube conditions may not reproduce the condition which exists in the human body where body cells may be protected from the harmful effects of drugs and chemicals by protective mechanisms. But the existence and nature of fluoride protective mechanisms are matters more for speculation than of fact."

McKeithen

PEARL RIVER (Special) — Gubernatorial candidate John McKeithen, on a four day stumping tour Friday accused Bob Kennon of deliberate untruths in the governor's race.

McKeithen said, "I accuse Bob Kennon of issuing untruths when he accuses me of connections with the Kennedy administration. The Kennedys have been calling people all over this state asking them to vote for anyone but John McKeithen. I have never had any connections with the Kennedys either directly or indirectly in my life and I oppose them with everything that is in me. The Kennedys don't fear Kennon or Jackson. The one man they do fear is John McKeithen."

McKeithen continued, "I challenge Robert 'Earl Warren' Kennon to admit that his state campaign manager, Frank Voelker, who is on the secret Davis payroll supported Kennedy in 1960. If Kennon wants to even approach fairness he will admit that my position with regards to the Kennedys has been exactly like that of Governor Faubus of Arkansas, Governor Wallace of Alabama, and Senator Eastwood of Mississippi. The records of these men in my opinion far surpasses Kennon. And while he's at it, Kennon should further admit that he allowed the University of Southwest Louisiana at Lafayette and McNeese State College in Lake Charles to be completely integrated while he was governor without raising his voice in protest."

McKeithen stated, "Of course, all of these untrue charges by Kennon are an obvious effort to smoke screen his own sorry record as having lobbied for the nefarious Ward-McIlhenny Oil and Gas Bill and having signed the smelly Sulphur Bill while he was Governor, a bill that every other Governor before from Governor Leche to Governor Jones to Governor Long, refused to sign. The fact is that Robert 'Earl Warren' Kennon is owned, body and soul, lock, stock and barrel by the Chris Faser, Ted Dunham and Buddy Billups click."

Turning to other opponents, McKeithen said, "I again call on the two Kennedy candidates, Assistant Whip Gillis Long and Ambassador Morrison to furnish the names of the people in this state who the President has called in an effort to get support for them. I demand that the Kennedy candidates request the President and his brother, Bobby Kennedy, to stay out of Louisiana politics."

McKeithen was accompanied by Ashton Mouton, Lafayette, candidate for lieutenant governor and Senator Speedy O. Long Jena, candidate for Insurance Commissioner, and John Hunt, attorney, Monroe.

Michot

LAFAYETTE (Special) — Speaking at the opening of parish headquarters in Lafayette Friday, gubernatorial candidate Louis J. Michot, Jr. said, "the temptation to believe some of the candidates in this race is great but campaign promises do not cancel out past deeds."

Michot said, "for too long an image of honest government is presented to the voters at election time, only to have the same old politicians appear back at their desks after election. Never will the state get a code of ethics, expanded civil service coverage, a strong, governing legislature, adequate control of spending, or business-like efficiency as long as independent-minded men and women do not vote their convictions. And this election, I think, all Louisiana realizes that," Michot added.

Michot asked that voters "look to the background of the men in this race. See if their deeds of the past, the jobs they've held, the way they've voted, indicate good government is a belief or a campaign smoke-screen. See if you can, in clear conscience, believe them. If you can't, if you're confused, support a man who has no obligations to be paid off at the campaign's end, who has given no promises of state jobs or business, who is running because he sincerely believes Louisiana must have a real change from the type of government she's suffered under in the past. That man is Louis J. Michot."

Kennon

DEQUINCY (Special) — Robert F. Kennon said Friday that he considered vast reforms in hospital and mental institutions one of the highlights of his administration as governor from 1952 to 1956.

He gave new hope to the mentally ill the crippled children and those afoul of the law for the first time, Kennon declared these people are human and deserve to be treated as such.

The panel institution here at Dequincy is a good example of the way in which we offer modern solutions to problems that required sympathetic understanding. He had reference to the Dequincy institution for first offenders usually of young age.

"The state penitentiary at Angola had become a national disgrace before we came into office," Kennon said. "All our penal institutions were modernized and a policy of rehabilitation rather than harsh punishment was instituted.

"Conditions had become so disgraceful something had to be done. Prisoners were cutting their heel strings to attract the attention of the outside world."

"Our entire system was under attack and justly so by the newspapers of the state. These conditions had been fully exposed when we took office."

Kennon pointed out that his administration went to work and after the modernization program was completed members of the state press were invited to visit the facilities. The job that had done received great acclaim and national recognition, Kennon said.

The former governor said his program of modernization was not limited to penal institutions. He said all state mental institutions and state hospitals received prompt attention too.

"The retarded children, the crippled children and our adult mentally ill were treated as human beings and given hope for rehabilitation, Kennon said. "We didn't regard them as hopeless cases to be penned up and kept from society forever."

Kennon said the institutional reforms of his previous term in office were carried out under non political citizen board type administration.

And when I am elected this time we will return to the non-political operation of all our state institutions, Kennon said.

He said that it had come to his attention that many problems now exist in the present administration of the state's charity hospital system and in some cases in penal institutions.

He said the non-political citizen board system similar to that used under his previous administration will be made constitutional in the operation of all of the states major spending agencies so that succeeding governors cannot address from office top rated members who would serve on over lapping terms.

Kirkpatrick

CROWLEY (Special) — Independent governor candidate Claude Kirkpatrick emphasized to an audience at the Rice Festival at Crowley, the importance of water to this area not only in seeking new industry but also to agriculture.

"New industry should always be welcomed into Louisiana, this point goes without saying, for new industry means new jobs and new wealth for lovely Louisiana," he said. "However, the importance of agriculture should certainly never be overlooked. Our fine state still derives a great deal of wealth from our farm products. As governor I will put special emphasis on the selling and the use of Louisiana farm products. Special attention will be paid to pushing research programs in this direction. I will encourage fairs and festivals such as this throughout our fine state."

"Louisiana has always been blessed with and abundant water supply, however, this too, can be better cared for and improved."

Morrison

NEW ORLEANS (Special) — Gubernatorial candidate DeLespess Morrison called Friday for a priority program in state spending and said the needs of our colleges and universities should be near the top not at the bottom.

Morrison blasted neglect of our educational institutions during a meeting with student supporters from Louisiana State University in New Orleans.

Morrison said he was glad to respond to student requests that gubernatorial candidates make an issue of neglect and disinterest in the problems of LSU N.O.

"This fine university serving metropolitan New Orleans and the outlying areas can have a great future, but it must and will when I am governor, receive proper support from the state," he said.

Morrison said sub-standard education is being forced on our youth because the present administration can't find funds to meet basic needs of our educational institutions.

Yet this same administration was able to finance a million dollar governor's mansion and a Sunshine bridge that starts nowhere and goes nowhere, he said.

Morrison promised as governor to see that needs of LSU N.O. get a top priority as will the needs of all our colleges and universities.

Morrison said the University of Southwestern Louisiana in Lafayette where he addressed some 1000 students Thursday has lost accreditation in three sections of its college of engineering because of lack of proper financial support.

Southeastern Louisiana College in Hammond has been one of the fastest growing colleges in the state in enrollment over the past five years, he added, but in that period received only a two per cent increase in funds allocated by the state.

Treatment received by our institutions of higher learning is a shocking indictment of recent administrations, Morrison said, and should be enough to make everyone realize how badly we need a sweeping change in Baton Rouge.

Rail Fight Mindful Of '90's

NEW YORK (AP) — A scrap over the Rock Island line, celebrated in balladry as a "mighty good road," savors increasingly of the legendary railroad battling of the late 19th century.

True, the old-time rough stuff between track gangs and in the securities markets is missing.

But within today's Marquis of Queensbury rules, rival contestants for control of the 7,800-mile, $485-million assets route of the Rockets are deep in a verbal slugfest and adroit financial jockeying.

This week, words like "scare-head," "mirage" and "chintzy offer" peppered the debate.

As well as big railroading stakes, big names are involved:

Henry Crown, 67, courtly financier, hotel and aerospace tycoon and son of a Latvian immigrant who in 1952 bought the 102-story Empire State Building—lock, stock and television tower. He later sold the building.

E. Roland Harriman, 67, son of the late Edward H. Harriman, famed railroad baron of a half century ago, and his father's successor as board chairman of the rich and storied Union Pacific.

Ben W. Heineman, 49, one-time racket buster for then Illinois Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson, who in seven years built the Chicago & North Western Railway from a ragtag operation into an up-and-at 'em contender.

A showdown, three weeks off, shapes up as a David vs. Goliath affair.

On Nov. 15, Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad stockholders in effect choose between Heineman's outfit and a might array of forces led by Crown and Harriman.

The Crown-Harriman team consists of the Union Pacific, seeking purchase of the Rock Island; the wealthy and powerful Southern Pacific Railroad, waiting to buy nearly half the Rock Island trackage if the UP plan prevails; and the Rock Island management, which struck the bargain with the UP.

Crown and close associates own the biggest block of Rock Island stock, more than 15 per cent. Crown is a road director and the finance chairman.

The stockholders, like voters on election day, will ballot on accepting or rejecting the UP offer: 0.718 UP shares for each Rock Island share.

A two-thirds majority is required for approval. If the UP loses, the door is left open for a complex C&NW counteroffer.

This week Arthur E. Stoddard, UP president; R. Ellis Johnson, Rock Island president; and Heineman, Crown and Harriman loosed wordy barrages at the opposition and beat the bushes for stockholder votes in New York, Boston and Chicago.

In Manhattan, the courted favor in Wall Street.

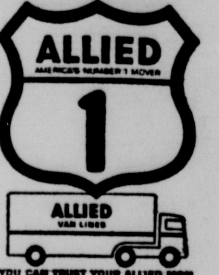

An estimated third of Rock Island shares are held in "street name" by brokers and nominees, who can influence voting of clients' shares, at least if their advice is asked.
